Allies Send Warning To Scandinavia; Italy Speeds Mobilization

Could Not Ignore Extension of Power By Soviet or Reich, Halifax Asserts

By Sidney J. Williams
United Press Staff Writer

London, April 5.—Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax late today informed the Swedish and Norwegian ministers that the Allies "could not remain indifferent" if the two Scandinavian countries permitted any extension of either German or Russian power in their territories.

Lord Halifax gave the ministers communications for their governments, coincident with indications that Allied naval action off Scandinavia still is under consideration in event diplomatic action fails to check the shipment of Scandinavian iron ore to Germany.

The communications were handed to Swedish Minister Prytz and Norwegian Minister Colban.

[From Narvik, Norway, the Associated Press reported that the iron ore port 200 miles above the Arctic Circle was being hastily fortified against the eventuality of Nazi reprisal bombings if Great Britain should succeed in cutting off ore shipments to Germany.

[A small Norwegian coastal gunboat entered the harbor, joining two larger boats about the size of destroyers. On a hill overlooking the harbor and loading docks are many anti-aircraft batteries and others are being set up as rapidly as possible.]

Reynaud Sees Envoys

(In Paris, French Premier Reynaud received Swedish Minister Hennings and Norwegian Minister Bachke at the same time and was understood to have given them "explanations" of the Allies' intentions to intensify the blockade of Germany, particularly as regards ore shipments from Sweden through Norwegian territorial waters.)

First of all, it was said, the British intend to make clear to Sweden and Norway that the Allies' political and strategic interest in Scandinavia remains a vital one regardless of the fact that peace has been restored in the Finnish-Russian conflict.

Russia's veto is believed here to have doomed a project for a Finnish-Swedish-Norwegian alliance.

Appeal to Reich Feared

Now, it was said, Russian plans to build a railroad from Kandalaksha on the White Sea to the town of Keimjaervi in northern Finland might prompt Sweden and Norway to seek reassurances from Germany against any further Russian expansion.

If Norway and Sweden should go to Germany for assurances against Russia, it would be a blow to Allied strategy and might defeat British efforts to choke off iron ore shipments to the Reich.

In the war of strangulation, Georges Monnet, French minister of blockade, flew to London today and plunged immediately into prolonged conference with Britain economic warfare minister, Ronald Cross.

Financial quarters asserted the "English Commercial Corporation," announced in Parliament yesterday, would make a bid to recover trade lost to Germany in the past 20 years by selling British products to the Balkans and buying, there, supplies which the German war machine needs.

Britain's own cupboard is well stocked with food, Lord Woolton said in his first interview as food minister.

Official quarters today said that one of five British trawlers attacked was sunk, but no lives lost in German aerial attacks in the North Sea Wednesday.

Rome Must Resist Now, Says Gayda; Press Prepares People for War

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, April 5.—Italian newspapers began writing today almost as if they were trying to convince the public that Italy is going to enter the war. The object is apparently to prepare people for the worst since Italy may, in spite of everything, be forced into the war.

[The Associated Press reported from Rome that Italian defense preparations received a further boost last night with publication of regulations for complete or partial military and civil mobilization of the entire nation.

Commission in Charge

[A new law adopted by the council of ministers, the cable stated, placed the mobilization in charge of the reorganized supreme defense commission headed by Premier Mussolini and including members of the cabinet and the heads of all branches of the armed forces.

[In 21 articles of mobilization, one provision made women and children over 13 years of age subject to mobilization for work in antiaircraft defense, factory work and other enterprises essential to the prosecution of war.

[The supreme defense commission was charged specifically with effecting "development and fullest attention to utilizing resources and activities of the nation for achieving victory."]

"It is more than ever necessary that Italy does not wait," writes Virginio Gayda, in the Giornale d'Italia. "Italy is not yet at war but must already resist a growing economic pressure and threat exercised for political reasons by one of the belligerent powers."

Duce's Paper Bellicose

Signor Gayda, of course, is referring to Great Britain. Premier Benito Mussolini's Popolo d'Italia is particularly bellicose. Replying to a French newspaper, which wrote that the time has come to take decisive action, the Popolo d'Italia says:

"We also believe that sooner or later a decisive game will have to be played with Italy. In Paris and London it is often repeated that not peace but only a truce was signed at Versailles. Very well, the Allies, therefore, will have to settle accounts with us—old accounts, which the truce left in suspense and new ones which have been added to the old."

La Tribuna accuses the Allies tonight of "hoping to provoke complications in southeastern Europe, so as to have the pretext to maneuver with their army in a battlefield which they sought in vain in the Scandinavian peninsula."

The Lavoro Fascista claims that the French cannot support the drain it suffered in the World War. The British, it says, are "very rich but they have no infantry massed with which to launch an attack."

Britain to Prey On Neutrals, Nazis Declare

Press Will Proclaim 'New Phase of War' After Goebbels Parley

By Percival Knauth

Berlin, April 5.—Following a conference this afternoon of leading German editors with the Propaganda Minister Goebbels, tomorrow morning newspapers will blazon forth the proclamation that Europe is about to experience a "new phase of war," and that the fateful hour for neutrals is about to strike.

The reshuffling of the British cabinet, in which Winston Churchill now occupies a leading position, is interpreted here as an indication that Great Britain is now determined to "attain success, whatever the cost." The Reich, it was indicated, is ready and waiting.

It is asserted that Great Britain is about to extend the battlefields beyond the deadlock in the west. In Norway, it is reported, French and British agents have been scouting for landing places for troops, while in the Balkans the British are launching an economic attack in an effort to deprive the Reich of this source of supplies.

Britain Blamed for Poles' Fate

A cross-section of the press will show headlines such as "Facing the New Phase of the War," "Extension of the Imperialistic War," "England Wants to Make the Southeast a Battlefield."

"Europe is facing a new phase of the war," writes the Lokal Anzeiger. "First Poland was sacrificed. Then France was to be a victim. Then

Buenos Aires, April 5 (AP).—The escape of three interned officers of the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee was disclosed tonight and one of them was reported unofficially to have already reached Germany with documents of the scuttled man-o'-war.

News of the escape of the officers followed disclosure that several of the Graf Spee's sailors had disappeared from interior provinces.

25,000 March Here Today As Army Shows Its Might

Stripped of its fuss and feathers, an Army of fighting men in fighting gear today will lead a parade of 25,000 down Constitution avenue to show the Nation how far it has come since that day just 23 years ago when it was flung unready into war.

Behind the infantry, cavalry and artillery, sandwiched among 31 bands, will be units of the National Guard, R. O. T. C., Marine sailors, Coast Guardsmen, Organized Reserves, patriotic organizations, veterans of the nation's wars, and one ancient who fought against this Nation 75 years ago.

In the long lines there will be little of the gold braid and shining brass dear to armies on parade. Instead, steel helmets will ride above the olive drab; steel will tip the rifles that rise and fall with the marching men; many of the rifles will be the new semiautomatic Garands which the Army hopes will make one man as deadly as five used to be.

The decision to march in full field equipment instead of dress uniforms was the result of the Army's wish to show itself in fighting trim after a year of expansion and intensive training. Some units usually seen in parades here, including the Sixty-sixth Infantry with its tanks,

Court Orders Arrest of 2 Dies Raiders

Accused of Violating Communists' Rights; 'Let Nation Decide,' Inquiry Chief Asks

Embroiled in court battles in two cities, Chairman Dies of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities, last night appealed to "the people of this country" to say if his drive on communism was right.

Even while Dies was called before a grand jury here to testify against two Communists who withheld information from his committee, a Federal judge in Philadelphia issued warrants for arrest of two committee investigators who seized Communist records there.

Federal District Judge George A. Welsh ordered the warrants for Committee Agents George F. Hurley and Chester Howe after Carle Reeve, Communist candidate for the Senate, complained that the raid violated his civil rights. Previously, Judge Welsh had said he hoped the committee would not use the seized material until the case before him was settled, and Dies replied that they already were a part of the committee record and nothing could be done about it.

Case for Highest Court

The judge declared the "fundamental principle" involved in the manner of conducting the raid made it necessary to send the case to a Federal grand jury as the first step toward a Supreme Court decision on how far raiders may go in seeking evidence of "un-American activities."

Dies last night, in a statement, said "according to the press, Judge Welsh has assigned as his reason for the issuance of the warrants his belief that this issue should be passed upon by higher courts.

"I think that the entire question as to whether or not agents of foreign dictators who claim constitutional rights and shirk constitutional duties can legally conceal from the Congress and the American people their true names and un-American activities must be immediately decided by the people of this country.

Not His to Act

"The Communist leaders have confessed their loyalty to Russia and their intention to destroy civil liberties in America if they should be successful. Our committee has pursued every lawful method in its attempt to expose all subversive groups and organizations. We have refused to violate the Bill of Rights even though we could have secured all the records of the Communist Party, and of Nazi and Fascist organizations by doing so."

Though issuing warrants for the committee's two investigators and for Lieut. Albert Granitz, of Philadelphia police, Judge Welsh rejected a suggestion from Reeve's counsel that action be taken against Dies himself and members of his committee, the Associated Press reported.

"Disciplining of Mr. Dies, if that be necessary," he said, "lies elsewhere."

Rebuilding Farm Fences

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Two liberal Republican farm State Senators yesterday came to the aid of Senator Vandenberg in his last primary stand against New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, while a third entrained for Nebraska for a series of Vandenberg speeches.

Pro-Vandenberg activity increased as it became apparent that another sweeping victory for Dewey in Tuesday's Nebraska primaries would shove the youthful New Yorker far ahead of all other candidates in the race for the G. O. P. Presidential nomination, and leave the Michigan Republican hopelessly trailing.

Senate Minority Leader McNary, of Oregon, and Senator Capper, of Kansas, both leaders of the Senate's liberal Republican farm bloc, wired Vandenberg's Nebraska manager high praise of the Senator's farm views. Both stressed they were taking no part in the pre-convention campaign.

Nye Speaks Tonight

Senator Nye, of North Dakota, likewise identified with the Senate's progressive Republican element, left yesterday for Nebraska to take the stump for Vandenberg. Nye will make a speech for his Michigan colleague in Fremont tonight, and another State-wide broadcast from Omaha. Fifteen-minute radio recordings by Nye will be broadcast from every Nebraska commercial station Monday night, the eve of the primary.

Hope for 50-50 Break

Vandenberg managers believed that if they could checkmate Dewey in Nebraska by even a 50-50 break on delegates, it would do much to offset the New Yorker's Wisconsin advantage and put the Michigan Senator again well up in the running. Retroactive effect of Dewey's Wisconsin triumph on Nebraska voters made their task more difficult.

Vandenberg stood on his former decision not personally to stump Nebraska, despite contentions by some of his friends that he lost in Wisconsin by failure to show himself there. But he reached more than 100 Nebraska "Republican cornhusker" rallies by radio last week. And yesterday the McNary

'Iron in His Blood'

Dr. Sayers Named to Succeed Mine Director Ickes Ousted

Public Health Service Physician Worked With Bureau 15 Years; Trade Groups Told of Appointment Have No Comment

Appointment of a surgeon to fill the post of Bureau of Mines director last night was received without comment by officials of national mining trade groups in Washington.

Dr. R. R. Sayers, senior surgeon of the Public Health Service and one-time safety director for the bureau, was assigned to the post on an "acting basis" by President Roosevelt, replacing John Wellington Finch, a mining expert, who was ousted January 31 by Secretary Ickes.

There was indication that the response of mining leaders would be friendly, since Dr. Sayers, through 15 years' service with the bureau, is widely known to the industry.

Some observers regarded the assignment as a compromise move, designed to ease the tension between the bureau and Secretary Ickes, which has been at a high pitch since the ouster of Finch.

Nearly a month before Finch was to leave office it was learned that Secretary Ickes had asked his resignation. Ickes asserted he had taken the action because Finch lacked "iron in his blood" and was unable to control a "bureaucratic" clique hostile to the Secretary.

The new appointment presumably marks Dr. Sayers as a man with necessary "iron in his blood."

Interior officials, however, scouted the suggestion that that any compromise was intended. Secretary Ickes picked a man he believes can run the bureau, it was said, and the reported "clique" has been disbanded through transferring personnel between the Washington office and the field staff.

One factor in choosing a doctor for the post, it was suggested, was the new department policy, adopted in the last two months, of making public the results of mine disaster investigations. Dr. Sayers, with his background in safety and health protection, is believed to favor this policy, which has been under attack by mine operators.

John L. Lewis is an Alexandria neighbor of Sayer's, but Interior officials said he had not been consulted. Failure of Finch to control bureau attacks on a mining bill supported by both Secretary Ickes and Lewis was reported to be one reason for his removal.

The possibility of a further shake-up in the bureau was left in question by Interior officials. No shake-up is planned now, they said, but

Senate Passes Trade Pact Extension, 42-37, Rejects Amendments

"These Principles Must Prevail"

Trade Treaties Vital to Stable Peace After War, Says Hull

Secretary of State Hull, hailing passage of the resolution extending the reciprocal trade agreements program, last night declared the principles underlying the program must prevail after the present war if there is to be stable peace and satisfactory economic progress.

He issued the following statement:

"The passage through Congress of the act continuing the trade-agreements program in force for the next three years will afford profound satisfaction to all those who have been observing and appraising the operation of the program from the standpoint of our best national interest.

HULL

"They know that the three high objectives of the trade agreements policy and of the principles which underlie it are: (1) to promote the fullest practicable development of both our domestic and foreign markets, thereby achieving increased production and employment; (2) to help in creating a solid foundation for any stable peace structure to follow the war; and (3) to safeguard free enterprise in this country against ever-expanding regimentation which would be the inescapable result of extreme foreign trade controls of the kind that would be rendered necessary by a reversion to the Hawley-Smoot embargo doctrine.

"The progress toward attaining these objectives, made in the last six years under conditions of unprecedented difficulty, has brought marked benefits alike to our agriculture, our industry, and our labor—without injury to anyone. The policy embodied in the 22 trade agreements already negotiated is an assurance that in the future operation of the program the interest of all sections of the country—West and East, South and North—and of all groups of the population will be as vigorously promoted and as scrupulously safeguarded as heretofore.

"This country and all other countries interested in the three great objectives of the trade-agreements program are giving increased support to the program and to the principles which underlie it. These principles must prevail in economic relations among nations at the end of present hostilities if our Nation and other nations are to have stable peace and satisfactory economic progress."

Roosevelt, Hull Triumph as Bill Goes to White House After 2-Week Fight

By John B. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

Chalking up a major victory for President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull, the Senate passed and sent to the White House yesterday the Administration bill for three-year extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act.

The measure was approved at the close of two weeks' debate by the close vote of 42 to 37, with the solid Republican bloc and a group of Eastern Democrats forming the bulk of the opposition. The only non-Democrat to vote in favor of the bill was Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska.

A succession of last-minute amendments was turned down during the course of the day, leaving the bill in exactly the form passed by the House and desired by the Administration.

Most significant of the suggested changes was the proposal of Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, that the present law be extended only one year—instead of three—from its expiration date, June 12.

Garner Rebuffed

This amendment, which had behind-the-scenes support of Vice President Garner, was defeated by the unexpectedly wide margin of 34 to 46, after it had been roundly denounced by President Roosevelt at his press conference and by Majority Leader Barkley on the floor of the Senate.

At least one of the Senators favoring the Walsh amendment attributed the size of the majority against it to a fear that its adoption would be generally interpreted as a victory for Garner over Roosevelt. The 12-vote margin, in fact, surprised even the most ardent Administration supporters, who a few moments before the actual balloting had predicted defeat of the amendment by only about five votes.

The Vice President's Texas colleagues, Senators Connally and Sheppard, both voted against the Walsh proposal.

They were joined by 41 other Democrats and Senator Norris, Senator Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, and Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut. Fourteen Democrats and 20 Republicans voted for the amendment.

Vital to Hull Campaign

Extension of Trade Agreements Act for three years has been one of the principal objectives of the Administration during the present session of Congress. Aside from its importance to the President, passage of the bill has been widely considered essential if Secretary Hull is to remain available as a Presidential candidate.

Political aspects of Hull's reciprocal trade policy, never forgotten but often unmentioned in debate, came to the fore in the closing hours of discussion yesterday.

Urging that his one-year extension proposal be accepted, Senator Walsh told members on his side of the aisle that the trade program was "not a political asset."

Might Lose 50 Seats

"I have heard Democrats in this chamber say that we would lose 50 seats in the House if this program is continued," he said.

Senator Barkley, on the other hand, reminded his colleagues of the Smoot-Hawley tariff fight under the last Republican administration, when "there was so much log rolling and back scratching you could almost see the blood flow."

But the coup de grace to the Walsh amendment, if any were needed, was delivered by the Presi-

Georgia Power Affairs Under SEC Scrutiny

Roosevelt Derides Tale Of Plot to Get Willkie, Holding Company Head

By Felix Cotten.

An investigation of the affairs of the Georgia Power Co., large unit in the $1,200,000,000 Commonwealth and Southern Corporation utilities system, has been launched by the Securities and Exchange Commission, it was learned yesterday.

This disclosure climaxed the following developments:

Wendell L. Willkie, president of Commonwealth & Southern and sometimes mentioned in discussion of a "business man for president," in a speech before the Boston Chamber of Commerce accused the Administration of making industry a whipping boy for Government.

President Roosevelt replied to an assertion by Willkie that New Deal officials had threatened to "get" him by saying that nobody takes things like that seriously.

Jones Predicts Farm Credit Bill Revision

Sponsor Concedes Probable Changes As Hearings Close

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The Jones farm credit bill last night appeared headed for extensive revision by the House Agriculture Committee as open hearings on the controversial measure were concluded.

Chairman Marvin Jones (Democrat), of Texas, sponsor of the legislation, conceded that the committee "undoubtedly will want to make some modifications," while several majority members said they will demand drastic changes in the bill.

Meantime, it was announced that Eugene B. Casey, of Gaithersburg, Md., Montgomery County dairyman, had been named assistant to Gov. A. G. Black of the Farm Credit administration. He will deal mainly with work on farm loans.

A 100 per cent New Dealer, Casey was an ardent supporter of former Representative David J. Lewis, President Roosevelt's candidate, in the unsuccessful "purge" of Senator Tydings two years ago.

Hearings on the Jones bill closed with the American Bankers Association blasting the bill as "the most serious threat to the credit structure of the Nation" ever considered in Congress.

A. M. L. Wiggins, chairman of the association's legislative committee, declared that "all totalitarian economic systems in the world have used such devices as this bill proposes to enable them to take over the agricultural sys-

"Power of Demons"

Mother of Chloe Davis Died Of Wrist Slashes, Doctor Finds

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, April 5.—An autopsy finding that Mrs. Lolita Davis, 36, "who believed in the power of demons," bled to death from slashed wrists cast doubt today on 11-year-old Chloe Davis' fantastic account of how her mother, two young sisters and baby brother died violently.

Chloe, described by a police matron as having "the face of an angel," and by a psychiatrist as "the cruelest-blooded, coolest individual I ever met," had said she beat her mother to death with a hammer. She told police in matter-of-fact voice her mother had asked her to do it after having killed the two little girls and beaten the boy unconscious. Chloe said she carried out her mother's order to finish killing the boy.

Late today blue-eyed Chloe startled police officials and a psychiatrist with this volunteered statement:

"Oh, yes, there is something I forgot to tell you yesterday—while mother was begging me to hit her with the hammer she asked me for a razor blade. I got one and gave it to her and watched her slash her wrists."

She had not been shown the

Speed Urged On Investment Trust Inquiry

Wagner Acts to Get Bill Before Congress At This Session

By the Associated Press

Chairman Wagner (Democrat), of New York, of the Senate Banking Committee undertook yesterday to speed up hearings on the Security Commission's investment trust regulation bill so that the measure may be considered at this session of Congress.

The New Yorker told representatives of the commission that he hoped they would conclude their presentation by the middle of next week. He said that witnesses for the industry would follow immediately.

After hearing SEC spokesmen review practices of some investment trusts studied by the commission, Wagner commented, "I don't see what answer there could be" to the testimony, but added that the committee wished "to hear all sides."

George C. Matthews, member of the SEC whose resignation is soon to become effective, expressed the opinion at today's hearing that "to leave the door open to a repetition of what has happened in the last 10 or 15 years" in some investment trusts would be "little short of criminal."

Urging "effective and compresentive regulatory legislation," Matthews asserted that "a form of control less than that may be as dangerous to the public as complete lack of restraints" becuase it might mislead investors into believing that they were protected.

David Schenker, describing transactions in the United Founders Trust system which he said cost stockholders hundreds of millions of dollars and at the same time enriched "insiders," asserted that present laws were inadequate to prevent such situations.

Baldwin Bane, chief of the registration section of the commission, asserted that "certain practices engaged in generally by the industry" were "generally admitted to be bad and "should be sharply restricted or prohibited altogether."

He cited marketing and pricing methods of some trusts and investments which he said were legal under present statutes but offered little chance of security for investor's funds.

Nye to Stump For Vandenberg

and Capper farm boosts were widely distributed.

Eyes of the Taft camp meanwhile turned keenly on Nebraska, even though the Ohio Republican is not a candidate there. Defeat of Vandenberg in Nebraska, many Taft followers believe, would transform the Republican contest into a two-horse race between Dewey and Taft. Relying on hidden delegate strength instead of on primaries, Taft supporters placed their estimates of delegates as high as 370, topping Dewey's.

Regarded as most significant in pointing Mid-western voting trends will be the special Congressional election Tuesday in Nebraska's First District. There J. Hyde Sweet, Republican, and Charles Dafoe, Democrat, are seeking the vacant House seat of the late Representative George Heinke, Republican. A victory by Sweet would be hailed by Republicans as bearing out G. O. P. trends in recent Ohio, Iowa and Wisconsin balloting. Should Dafoe win, Democrats will claim the trend is their way.

McNary's Message

In support of Vandenberg's farm views, Senate Minority Leader McNary, himself Oregon's "favorite son" candidate, wrote Charles S. Reed, chairman of the Volunteer Vandenberg Committee of Nebraska, that he felt "a degree of responsibility to my farm friends in Nebraska and elsewhere in connection with their best legislative welfare."

"I owe it to candor to tell them that I have worked intimately with Senator Vandenberg for 12 years and that I know him to have a fine conception of our farm problem and a constant willingness to cooperate in behalf of the agricultural welfare," wired McNary.

"We have yet to answer the farm problem adequately. It will dominate the problems of the next administration. I am simply saying to my farm friends that I know they will be safe with Senator Vandenberg. He may reject temporary patent medicines, but he will always be ready with real cures."

Both McNary and Capper noted that Vandenberg cast his first vote in the Senate for the McNary-Haugen farm bill, the two-price principle of which he is espousing in the present campaign.

Capper, designated the "favorite son" of G. O. P. Kansans at the Landon-led Kansas Republican convention Thursday, wired Reed that "the American farmers can trust Arthur Vandenberg, and their trust will not be betrayed."

Friend of Farmer

"He knows the importance of agriculture in the national economy," said Capper. "He has the interests of the American farmers at heart. He can be trusted to work intelligently and conscientiously in their behalf."

Voicing a hope that a real solution of the farm problem will be approached in the next administration, Capper said he had "every confidence that Arthur Vandenberg, whatever his official position may be, will work for that solution, and will support the best program which can be worked out to bring about an equitable relationship between agriculture, industry and labor. I have confidence in Senator Vandenberg, and I believe the farmers of Nebraska and the Nation can place their confidence in him, knowing it will not be misplaced."

Vandenberg's decision not to lose Nebraska's 14 delegates to Dewey without a battle coincided with an "unequivocal" denial by Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota that he told Washington friends he hoped to influence the Minnesota delegation to support Dewey.

Favors Uninstructed Group

In St. Paul, Gov. Stassen, frequently mentioned as the possible convention keynoter, said contrary to published reports he favors an uninstructed Minnesota delegation. He said the Minnesota delegates should "determine what course they wish to follow" and he hoped to see an unpledged delegation, "truly representing the Republican Party of the State."

As the President at his press conference maintained silence on his plans, new Democratic "harmony" proposals were put forward at the Capitol. Disturbed by party friction, some Democrats at the Capitol would like to see the breach between President Roosevelt, Vice President Garner and Postmaster General Farley healed by a get-together conference between the three in Democratic Party interests.

But one conservative Democratic Senator suggested there could be no harmony within the party so long as the third term continues an issue.

Pelley to Fight Court's Order On Extradition

Silver Shirt Chief To Appeal Sending Him to North Carolina

William Dudley Pelley, white-goateed Silver Shirts' chieftain, last night prepared to carry his fight to the Supreme Court against the District Court's order yesterday that he be sent back to North Carolina for sentence for frauds of which he was convicted five years ago.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins ruled that Pelley was a fugitive from justice and that the North Carolina warrant for his arrest complied with all the legal requirements.

Dies Summoned

Justice Adkins refused to consider Pelley's charges that there was a conspiracy to "railroad him to jail," instigated by Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas. If Pelley had any defense of this sort, said Adkins, he had a right to presetn it to the North Carolina courts.

Pelley's lawyer, T. Edward O'Connell, summoned Dies, who is chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, and Representative Samuel Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, to testify yesterday about the alleged conspiracy, but Justice Adkins refused to require them to take the stand.

Court Warns Lawyer

O'Connell clashed frequently and furiously over the conspiracy charge with Assistant District Attorney John C. Conliff, jr., and Special Prosecutor Robert R. Williams, of Asheville. Justice Adkins finally intervende to warn O'Connell that if he brought the subject up again he would be held in contempt of court.

"Your honor has no right to threate'n me with contempt," snapped O'Connell. "If I am in contempt, then I ought to be held."

As soon as the court ruled, O'Connell gave notice of appeal to the United States Court of Appeals here and Pelley's appeal bond was set at $5,000, which was promptly posted by Bondsman I. B. Jones. O'Connell said Pelley would not go back to North Carolina until every issue in the case had been taken to the Supreme Court.

While these developments were afoot, echoes of the committee's work resounded in the office of United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Two Boston Communists, Thomas F. P. O'Dea and Philip Frankfeld, were unexpectedly jailed here in default of $1,000 0bond each after they were arrested in a corridor of the old House Office Building yesterday. Commissioner Turnage issued warrants charging them with refusing to answer questions bemanfor the Dies committee. The charge carries a penalty of 1 to 12 months in jail and a fine of $100 to $1,000.

Sol Cohen, New York attorney who has defended Communists indicted here for failing to register with the State Department as foreign agents, appeared for the Bostonians when they were taken befor Commissioner Turnage.

The arraignment of Frankfeld and O'Dea was set for next Friday and they were jailed in default of $1,000 bond each.

O'Dea told the Dies Committee earlier in the week that numerous Harvard University students belonged to the Young Communists League but refused to tell their names.

Frankfeld refused to tell the committee anything unless he was permitted first to read a resolution denouncing the investigation. The committee was unwilling to hear the resolution and prepared to have him cited by the House for contempt.

Assistant District Attorney John W. Fihelly, chief of the civil division of the prosecution staff, said the men were arrested on warrants, without waiting for a formal citation of contempt of the House, to avert a possible protracted fight to return them here for trial if they got away from Washington before the citation was adopted.

Fihelly said the Government would insist that the men post real estate surety.

District Attorney Curran sought indictments from a Federal Grand Jury here of two Pittsburgh Communists who defied the committee in hearings a few days ago.

James H. Dolsen, Pittsburgh, was cited by the House for contempt after he refused to name the Communist who took out his party membership card in the name of "Franklin D. Roosevelt" in order to keep his own name off the records.

Also asked was the indictment of George Powers, Pittsburgh, who was cited for contempt of the House for refusing to give the Dies Committee the party's membership lists for his city. He claimed the lists were wanted so the members could be blacklisted by industry.

Beside Representative Dies, witnesses before the grand jury here yesterday were Hurley, the committee investigator accused in Philadelphia, and Robert Barker, a committee investigator. Robert E. Lynch, committe ecounsel, was called to Judiciary Square but did not enter the grand jury room.

Fihelly said that the grand jury was unlikely to report its action to the court for at least ten days, because of the involved nature of the prosecution.

Son Discovers J. T. Finnegan Dead in Auto

John Thomas Finnegan, 63, died last night in the automobile of his son, Dr. John F. Finnegan, of 1342 East Capitol street, who was visiting a patient in the 800 block of Varnum street northwest.

Dr. Finnegan, who often took his father on his night rounds, left him in the automobile listening to the radio. When he returned a few minutes later his father was dead, the radio still playing. He said his father retired from the Government Printing Office in 1933 because of a heart ailment, but attributed his death to a cerebral hemorrhage.

Australian Envoy To Make 'Friendly Air Raids' on U. S.

By the Associated Press

Richard Gardiner Casey, first Australian minister to the United States, intends to make a series of "friendly air raids" on various parts of this country in a plane he has just purchased.

"This country is so diverse in its products, types of people and ways of life that one has simply got to move about to build up a composite picture of this great country of yours," he told reporters yesterday.

Already an experienced flier, Casey expects to obtain an American pilot license soon.

Roosevelt Will Leave Today for Hyde Park

President Roosevelt has arranged to leave today for his home at Hyde Park, N. Y. He told reporters he has a good many things to do there, such as choosing tints for walls of his new library and planting some trees. He will remain until Monday, he said.

Life-and-Death Fight of Insects Held Necessary

Brayton Eddy, State entomologist and founder of the insect zoo at Goddard Park, Rhode Island, last night lectured before the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall. He illustrated his lecture with motion pictures of insects in "monster" size, and natural color slides.

The pictures showed the daily struggle between insects and their enemies, a conflict which the speaker said, despite its seeming ruthlessness, was essential to the maintenance of a biological balance.

On the theory that man will not kill what he appreciates and does not fear, the speaker stressed the need for a broader public knowledge of insects and their enemies. Only thus can be recognized the value to man of such species as the calosoma beetles and praying mantis, skunks, crows and snakes, as well as other misunderstood creatures, he said.

He told police the car was a maroon sedan with Virginia tags.

He was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

Alcohol Agency To Be Retained, Alexander Says

To Be Under Treasury; Abolition Was Part Of Merger Plan No. 3

W. S. Alexander, Federal Alcohol Administration chief, announced, following a conference yesterday with President Roosevelt, that, contrary to the President's third reorganization order, the agency would not be abolished, but would be operated as a separate unit in the Treasury Department.

Details have not been worked out, he explained. It appeared to be questionable, however, whether the personnel of FAA, numbering about 160 persons, would be cut in half, as was intimated when reorganization order No. 3 was announced.

This raises the question as to whether the third reorganization order will effect the $150,000 a year saving estimated by the President. Most of the saving would accrue from the curtailment of FAA jobs.

It is suggested that the FAA may be given the status of a division in the Treasury. In that case, Alexander may remain as division chief, it is said.

Flighty Person Can't Become A Naval Flier

So you want to be a naval aviator?

Well, if the family histories of your parents and grandparents can stand critical scrutiny and your own record (from birth) is satisfactory, and you are physically fit, courageous, intelligent and have a snappy reaction time—if you can get a passing mark on these and a myriad other hurdles, you have a chance of winning your wings in the Navy.

That is what Lieut. Comdr. Rex H. White, flight surgeon at the Pensacola Naval Air Station, told the postgraduate course in aviation University.

Emotional fitness is as important asphysical fitness, he said, pointing out that the neurotic, easily upset, individual belongs somewhere else than in a fighting plane trying to sit down on a carrier riding a choppy sea.

Grand Jury Given Narcotic Case

Edward R. Daniels, 33, was held to the grand jury yesterday on 22 counts of violating narcotic laws, by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Arrested Thursday afternoon by Detective Sergts. Robert Bryant and H. H. Carper and Federal agents, Daniels pleaded not guilty and waived preliminary hearing. Bail was set at $1,500.

Bryant said nearly an ounce of heroin was confiscated. The defendant said he lived at 1256 Otes street northeast.

WifeSues Phil Furr For Maintenance

Phil Furr, Washington fighter who is rated one of the ten top welterweights of the country, was sued for maintenance in the District Court yesterday by Mrs. Mary Ditoto Furr, whose petition said he deserted her April 21, 1939.

The complaint said they were married in Alexandria, Va., June 20, 1932, and that since the separation Furr has contributed nothing to Mrs. Furr's support, although he makes $7,500 a year as a fighter.

The complaint asks alimony and that the husband be required to pay for medical care needed by his wife. Mrs. Furr lives at 465 H street southeast. She gave her husband's address as 511 Eleventh street northwest.

Garner May Capture 3d Wisconsin Delegate

Milwaukee, April 5 (AP).—Vice President Garner, already assured two of the 24 Democratic delegates of Wisconsin, may capture another in the Third Congressional District.

William G. Evenson, of Baraboo, an "officially indorsed Roosevelt-Farley" candidate, had a lead of only three votes over John C. Dugan, of La Crosse, Garner-pledged man, on the basis of returns from 355 of 362 precincts in Tuesday's election.

Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, won all 24 Republican delegates.

Farmers Need More Income Gannett Says

'Save Agriculture To Save America,' He Urges in Omaha

By the Associated Press

Lincoln, Nebr., April 5.—Frank C. Gannett, publisher, declared here tonight that "the farm problem, the problem of all primary and raw material producers, is essentially a price problem."

"What the farmer needs is more income, more money to buy with and less need for borrowing," he asserted in an address prepared for broadcast.

Gannett said, "the farmer should have the home market, low interest rates, soil conservation, the benefit of core cooperative buying and distribution, the cheapest possible shipping facilities, the advantage of more research, and more helpful handling of surpluses."

Emphasizing that "the way to end the farmer's distress is to restore fair prices for his products," he added:

"Retaining what is good of emergency measures so long as they are needed, we should set up a monetary authority under mandate of Congress to provide a dollar of stable purchasing power. A truly honest dollar will give to the farmer and other producers of basic commodities a just income; it will be fair to both creditors and debtors; it will be a brake on both booms and depressions; it will give such stability that we can invest and build for the future."

He said the great national farmers organizations such as the Grange, the Farm Bureau, the Farmers Union and the National Cooperative Council were united on this policy, and concluded "my call to the farmers is: Use your political power to put through the program upon which your great national farm organizations have united . . . save agriculture to save America."

Dr. Gewehr Will Address Women's City Club Tuesday

Current Events Section to Hear American University Professor Discuss Clarence Streit's 'Union Now'

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, chairman of the current events section of the Women's City Club, has announced Dr. Wesley H. Gewehr, professor of history at American University, as the speaker for the meeting Tuesday at 5 o'clock at the clubhouse. Dr. Gewehr, who will discuss Clarence Streit's "Union Now," will address the section for the second time this season.

The club has, for April, an exhibition of the work of Hugo Inden of the Abbott Art School. His textile designs as well as his oils and water colors will be shown.

The business and professional section will be addressed at its dinner Wednesday night by Dr. Lucille Reynolds, chief of the family credit section of the Farm Credit Administration. Dr. Reynolds was to have spoken at the March meeting, which was postponed.

Mrs. Odessa V. Glover, chairman of the Tuesday evening bridge section, will be in charge of a bridge party sponsored by her committee to raise funds for the club's summer expenses.

The last meeting of the civics section will be April 13. It will be a "look see" trip. All members who wish to join this group are asked to meet in the front room of the club's coffee shop for a light luncheon at 1:30, after which they will go in private cars of the members to the Receiving Home, Gallinger Hospital and the Home for the Aged at Blue Plains. Members who have cars are asked to communicate with Mrs. Wiley, chairman of the section.

Actor Arnold Says Boys Clubs Build Citizens

Campaign for Funds Has Attained Fifth Of $50,000 Goal

Activities of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club were described yesterday by Edward Arnold, motion picture actor, as an important link in a current Nation-wide movement to formulate a "better citizenship" youth program.

Arnold, speaking at a campaign committee meeting of the Boys' Club, said he became interested in youth problems because he, himself, was a product of the lower East Side of New York and had to "dig for everything I got."

Citizenship Booster

He is in ashington as a volunteer booster for legislation to establish a national day of citizenship recognition. ith him at the meeting was Benjamin Neal, founder of the "I am an American" Citizenship Foundation.

"When a youth reaches the age of 21," said Arnold, "he knows merely that 'now I can vote.' But he doesn't know why he should nor what it means to himself or his country."

He urged support of the "I Am an American" movement as a means of building better citizens and lauded Washington for its "gratifying interest" in youth problems.

Fifth of Funds Obtained

The Police Boys' Club campaign committee announced it had attained 20 per cent of a $50,000 goal. The total amount to be raised is $80,000—al lbut the $50,000 figure was donated prior to opening of the campaign March 30.

It was reported that $6,184.80 had been raised since the committee met last week. Members of the group pledged to obtain 75 per cent of the goal before next Tuesday's meeting.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

D. C. Chapter American Guild of Organists presents Lyman McCrary and Jean Phillips in an organ recital Thursday night in the Washington Chapel of Latter-Day Saints. Program of compositions by Bach, Dallier, Jongen, Priest and Karg-Elert.

Attendance last evening at the fourth recital in the current festival of organ music must have gratified the members of the local chapter of the American Guild of Organists who are presenting the public with meritorous programs and asking only that people come to hear them at no other cost than time. The festival is offering samples of the vast literature for the organ, and these glimpses should stimulate the curiosity which leads to permanent interest.

BROWN

Lyman S. McCrary, organist of Hamline Methodist Church, shared the program with Jean Phillips, former assistant organist to the late Edgar Priest in Washington Cathedral. He began the recital with a clear and rhythmically vital exposition of Bach's prelude and fugue in B minor. His other offerings were modern works: "Stella Matutina" by Henri Dallier (1849-1934), French organist who succeeded Gabriel Faure in the Madeleine Church, and a "Sonata Eroica" by Joseph Jongen, the Belgian composer, who was born in 1873 and is still active as director of the Brussels Conservatory.

Mr. McCrary's performance of these compositions showed his taste in registration and his technical skill at the console. The piece by Dallier is a pleasing reverie of poetic quality, while the Jongen sonata calls upon the full resources of the organ. Those who have heard some of Jingen's chamber music could recognize in the sonata his eclectic style which draws upon both romanticism and modernism. There were resemblances to Schumann here and there, and in the slow movement several passages of Debussyan progressions.

Jean Phillips chose as her first number a prelude by Edgar Priest with a beautiful melodic theme treated in a meditative manner. This was followed by two of Bach's chorale-preludes: "From God Shall Nothing Turn Me" and "Now Come, Redeemer of Our Race." She registered there with a quietude that sustained their religious feeling.

In her final number, Karg-Elert's "Symphonic Kanzona," she demonstrated her ability to project her personality through the most impersonal of instruments. Her performance of this exacting score was not only technically competent but also emotionally luminous.

Sigfrid Karg, who added Elert to his name for purposes of euphony and distinction, died in 1933 after having made many contributions to organ technic, particularly in tone-color and dynamic contrasts. The "Symphonic Kanzona" is one of his most important works and demands much from the organist who performs it. His contrapuntal ingenuity, which equals that of Bach, is shown in the splendid passacaglia that forms the third movement, and also in the closing fugue where the principal subject is cleverly announced in inversion.

The festival will close tonight with a recital by Robert Ruckman, organist of Epworth Methodist Church, and Jean Slater Appel, organist of Western Presbyterian Church, who will play compositions by Bach, Schumann, Widor, Vierne, Brahms and Reger.

Truck Kills Va. Child

Covington, Va., April 5. (AP).—Thomsa Searce, 14-month-old son of Mr. nad Mrs. Lewis O. Searce, was instantly killed last night when struck by a truck said by officers to have been driven by James C. Snead, Jr. Deputy Sheriff Cecil Carter said apparnetly the child ran through the gate, into the path of the truck.

Chloe Davis' Father Grief-Stricken

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Barton Davis, father of Chloe Davis, 11, held on suspicion of murder in the deaths of her mother, two sisters and a brother, yesterday insisted that his daughter was innocent autopsy report at that time.

Dr. Frank R. Webb said he found arteries in the mother's arms had been severed and she died from loss of blood. He declared he found no evidence of a skull fracture.

Father Thinks Her Innocent

Chloe's father, F. Barton Davis, maintained his belief in the innocence of his daughter.

"Chloe couldn't have done anything like that," the 51-year-old grocery store manager cried repeatedly. "If she did, her mother made her do it."

"There are so many things about my wife that people don't understand. She believed she had the power of demons.

"I took her to two doctors and then to a psychiatrist. The psychiatrist told me there was nothing wrong with her that couldn't be cured. He said there was something inside of her that needed treatment."

Davis declared an attorney friend of the family told him today that Mrs. Davis asked him three weeks ago how to purchase enough chloroform to kill people.

"She asked him, too, where was the best place to hit people on the head if you wanted to kill them," the father added.

"She Saved Her Mother

"They can't blame this on Chloe just because she can't remember everything. She loved her mother. She was an obedient child. If she did anything she did it because her mother told her to."

Taken to her blood-splattered home, the child calmly told her story of how her mother, declaring that "demons" were after her, killed the three children with the hammer yesterday and then, after setting fire to her own hair, commanded Chloe to beat her. Later, Chloe said she also killed her young brother.

Dr. V. J. Stack told police Davis telephoned him two weeks ago and said he feared Mrs. Davis was losing her mind.

"I have known the Davis family for years," Dr. Stack said, "and knew the parents to be devoted to their four children."

These men turned attention on the Balkans. British envoys to southeastern capitals, meantime, are hurrying home to contribute first-hand information toward the campaign to choke Germany's trade through her back door.

Monnet said tonight, "We are very satisfied with the result of the measures taken up to the present and the Allies are going to take new measures to choke Germany more and more.

Treated for Anemia

He added Mrs. Davis and the children were in his office last Wednesday to confer with an associate about treatments she had been undergoing for anemia.

Police Capt. Edgar Edwards said he was convinced the flippant sixth-grade girl fatally beat her mother after mortally wounding her sisters, Daphne, 10, and Deborah Ann, 7, and her brother Marquis, 3. Chloe was booked on suspicion of murder.

Dr. Paul de River, police department psychiatrist, said of her:

"She is cool, has no depth of feeling, has great powers of imagination for fantasy and is distinctly capable of planning and committing the murders. But, so far, I believe her story more than I disbelieve it."

Accounts Varied

The latest of several somewhat varied accounts of the killings told by the slangy youngster was that her mother killed the two girls, that she bludgeoned her mother to death with the hammer at the mother's command, and then struck her brother three times and beat him to death "to put him out of his misery."

"I observed nothing that would indicate she was deranged," Dr. de River said.

Under California law, a child under 14 found guilty of murder is incarcerated in a correctional institution until he reaches the age of 21, when he would be released.

Judge Says Wifely Intuition Isn't Proof of Adultery in Md.

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 5.—Mere "suspicion of unchastity" is insufficient grounds for divorce in Maryland, the Court of Appeals noted today in reversing a Washington County divorce decree and refusing alimony to the wife.

Ruling in an appeal of Charles C. Renner, Hagerstown garage owner, from a divorce granted his wife, Mrs. Mary Ella Renner, the court held Mrs. Renner had failed to prove Renner unfaithful. Her only evidence at the divorce hearing indicated a "suspicion" he was guilty of adultery, the opinion said.

The Renners were married in 1912. Mrs. Renner left her husband in January, 1936, filing suit for divorce May 4, 1939.

On the evening of May 17, 1935, the ruling, written by Associate Judge Edward S. Delaplaine, said Mrs. Renner saw her husband in his garage with another woman.

Despite the fact he was "working on the woman's automobile while the doors were open and the lights were on, Mrs. Renner accused him of unfaithfulness and swore that she was through with him forever," Judge Delaplaine added.

Although her divorce action accused Renner of committing adultery with "numerous women" whose names she did not know, Mrs. Renner produced no evidence at the hearing to support her contention, he said. Instead, she named Mrs. Melba Longstreth, her husband's bookkeeper since 1936, as corespondent, the opinion continued.

Both Mrs. Longstreth and Renner denied her accusation and no evidence "of proximate familiarities or infatuation" or "adulterous dispositions of either" was introduced, according to the record.

"If the evidence does nothing more than raise a suspicion of unchasity, it is insufficient to warrant a divorce," Judge Delaplaine asserted.

Property Owners Win In Condemnation Suit

Special Dispatch to The Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 5.—Property owners claimed "victory" in the first of eight postoffice site condemnation suit appeals in Federal Court here yesterday when a jury said a "fair price" for the Morison property—key property in the list of eight sought by the Government—would be $21,500.

Whether the Government will accept the juror's recommendations was not made known immediately. Jury trial of the other appeals was immediately started.

Sewer Opened Into River For 20 Days

Pipe Condemned; 'Won't Be Bothersome,' Maj. Tansey Believes

A large portion of Washington's sewage will be dumped into the Anacostia River near Bolling Field for the next 20 days, but Maj. Patrick H. Tansey, acting Engineer Commissioner, yesterday said "it will not be bothersome" to nearby residents.

"Not very much," he added.

Two hundred feet of the old Bolling Field sewer, which runs alongside the field and St. Elizabeths Hospital, was found to be defective yesterday while workmen were busy on the new sewer which is to replace it.

Maj. Tansey immediately ordered the sewer condemned and requested the contractors on the new sewer to divert the sewage into the river and at the same time proceed with repairs on the defective sewer. The contractor is the Wagner Larsen Co., of New York.

This work will cost about $28,000. The new sewer, now being built by the company, under public works financing, will cost $300,000.

Maj. Tansey said sewage was diverted into the river last winter, but that no one ever knew about it because the weather did not permit any "foul odors" to escape.

Funeral Today In Laytonsville For N. W. Gregg, 45

A heart attack caused the unexpected death in his home near Laytonsville Thursday of Norman W. Gregg, 45, well-known Laytonsville district farmer and lifelong resident of Montgomery County.

The funeral services will take place at 2 p. m. today in the Laytonsville Methodist Church. The services will be conducted by the Rev. Dillon B. Groves, pastor, assisted by the Rev. W. A. Ledford, former pastor, with burial in the Laytonsville Cemetery.

Mr. Gregg leaves his wife, Mrs. Lucy T. Gregg; two daughters, Hallie and Margaret L. Gregg, and two sons, James N. and William S. Gregg, all of the Laytonsville neighborhood; two brothers, Charles Gregg, Olney and William Gregg, Ashton, and a sister, Mrs. Edgar Davis, of Sandy Spring.

State Increases Armory Allotment For Winchester

Richmond, Va., April 5 (AP).—The State military board today increased armory allocations for Winchester and Covington from $12,000 to $15,000 each and granted Fredericksburg, which previously had received no State assistance, $2,400 for completion of its building.

A Winchester delegation including Senator Burr P. Harrison, Commissioner of Revenue C. P. McVicar, City Manager Lee Grant and City Councilmen O. L. Jamison and Lawrence C. Hollis asked for an increase of $5,000. Senator Harrison said the increase was requested because the city was furnishing a 25-acre site and because no WPA labor was available to help with the project. Capt. H. B. Boynton, the architect, joined the Winchester delegation in the hearing before the board.

Capt. James G. King, jr., appeared for Fredericksburg.

3 Saved as Fire Sweeps Section Of Ellicott City

Ellicott City, Md., April 5 (AP).—Three persons were rescued by ladders and 13 others forced to flee their smoke-filled rooms in an early morning fire sweeping four buildings in the business section today.

The stubborn fire destroyed a Chinese hand laundry owned by Der Wong, who discovered the blaze; wrecked the grocery of Joseph Berger, and extensively damaged the Church of God and a filling station on the corner.

Five fire companies from Ellicott City, Catonsville, Savage, and Jessups fought the blaze.

Berger and his wife, and John W. Hilsinger, 70, a boarder, were taken by ladders from a second-floor apartment over the grocery. They said the stairs were too choked with smoke to permit escape.

Caucus Maps Plans to Save District Tax

Bates, Seal, Morgan Meet With Dirksen On Income Levy

Plans for salvaging the District income tax were discussed yesterday at a minority caucus in the office of Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, father of the law.

Present were Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts; Corporation Counsel Seal and Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the District Board of Tax Appeals.

After the caucus Dirksen said no decision had been reached as to what amendment would be recommended, but he indicated that he and other members of the committee were determined not to leave the revenue problem hanging fire until next year.

Representative Bates said that Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee and other members of the committee now out of the city would be consulted before a decision is reached.

Seal furnished the committee members with data on the reciprocal provisions of about 25 State income tax laws and explained the recommendations of the Commissioners that the District act be extended to cover all earnings derived in Washington.

Two Virginians Are Candidates For I.C.C. Post

By the Associated Press

Two Virginians were added yesterday to the listof candidates for the Interstate Commerce Commission vacancy created by the resignation of Marion M. Caskie.

Charles K. Carter, jr., formerly of Danville and Martinsville, and now associated with the Southern Railway at Greensboro, N. C., was indorsed by Representative Burch (Democrat), of Virginia. Representative Bland (Democrat), of Virginia had urged the appointment of Jess C. Harraman, formerly of Whitestone, Va., and now director of parcel post in the postoffice here.

Political leaders in the deep South have demanded appointment of a Southerner to protect recent gains made by the Southern States in obtaining freight rate "parity."

Easter Difference Affects Report On Retail Sales

Because of different Easter shopping dates, the Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that department store sales in the week ended March 30 were 20 per cent below the corresponding week last year. This year the week was after Easter and last year before Easter.

In the preceding week sales had been 12 per cent above last year, and in the four weeks ended March 30 sales averaged 1 per cent more than last year.

Cherry Blossom Hopes Chilled

Hope that the cherry trees would blossom in advance of the latest possible date, set for April 12, was dashed by yesterday's drop in temperature. "Fair and continued cool" was the forecast for today.

A survey yesterday failed to disclose a single blossom along the Tidal Basin. The slightest break in the weather, however, should produce a few blossoms overnight.

The mercury yesterday registered a high of 54 at 5:30 p. m. Lowest temperature was 46, at 10:30 a. m.

No Tail Light on Horse, Equestrian Is Fined $5

Luray, Va., April 5 (AP).—Elbert Lester wrecked his car to avoid striking a nocturnal horseman. The trial justice court considered the case and fined Roy Frazier $5 for riding a horse on the highway without a tail light.

Communion Rites To Be Celebrated At Clarendon

Communion and reception of new members will feature services tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Clarendon (Va.) Presbyterian Church, where the Rev. Isaac Steenson will preach on "A Biblical Definition of a Church."

The revival being held at the Arlington Church of the Nazarene will continue through the coming week, with Dr. C. E. Hardy, evangelist, of Nashville, Tenn., preaching. The Rev. Marvin S. Cooper is pastor. The meetings are being held daily at 7:45 p. m., Saturdays excepted.

Falls Church Presbyterian Church worshipers tomorrow at 11 a. m. will hear Dr. Alton B. Altfather, pastor, speak at 11 a. m. on "God in You." The youth groups will meet at 5:15, 6 and 7 p. m. The Ladies' Aid Society will serve a luncheon on Wednesday from 12:30 to 1:30 p. m. in the parish hall.

East Superior To West, Asserts Dr. Steinmeyer

Should the East and West ever meet "on ean equal footing," the East would conquer the West, Dr. Reuben Steinmeyer, professor of political science at the University of Maryland, said last night at the father and son banquet of Woodside Methodist Church, Silver Spring, Md. More than 250 were present.

The United States, he said, should recognize the psychology of the Oriental in dealing with Japan.

E. C. Elting, president of the Men's Bible Class, was toastmaster; Howard R. Smith, program chairman, was song leader; music was led by Norman Gleekler; the invocation was by Paul M. Lehman, and the benediction by Dr. Ralph D. Smith, pastor. The Ladies Aid Society, under direction of Mrs. Walter Spillman, arranged the dinner.

City Gets 'White Way'

Jane Elizabeth Carlson, a member of the senior class of Shenandoah College, Dayton, has been chosen to represent her school. She is the daughter of John B. Carlson, of Newington.

Constance Ann McConnell, daughter of W. C. McConnell, of Clarksburg, will represent Wilson College, of Chambersburg, W. Va.

Poor Family Has Dinner On the Census

Enumerator Spends $3 of Her Own to Feed Hungry Children

A woman census taker spent $3 of her own money yesterday to buy food for a family of four or five children when she learned that they were hungry. Census officials withheld the names of parties involved.

Another enumerator found her work made easy for her when she ran into a party in progress at a lodging house. After being mistaken for a guest, she explained her mission and obtained most of her data without leaving the party.

Garnett Brown, Census Bureau official, said that the work of tabulating District residents was proceeding smoothly with "increased production daily."

George Thomas Boarman, 83, the father of 27 children, yesterday was boasting of the story of his family told to a census enumerator.

Boarman lives in a wooded section near Fourth street and Valley place southeast. Boarman told a census taker that his great strength and vitality were due to his ability to eat a great deal.

Once he ate a whole turkey at a sitting, he said, and won a $10 bet. Another time he consumed a gallon of oysters.

D. C. Man Dies As Car Plunges Off High Bank

Noel B. Clement, Dairy Employe, Drops 28 Feet

One Washington man was killed yesterday when his car tumbled over a 28-foot embankment in nearby Virginia. The day's traffic mishaps in and near the Capital also injured two Prince Georges County men as they stood in a street car loading zone in Mount Rainier, and a Washington youth was struck by a hit-run driver.

The body of Noel B. Clement, 25, manager of the shipping department of the Highland Farms Dairy, was found early yesterday morning in his demolished automobile at the bottom of an embankment where it left the Lee boulevard near Glencarlyn, Arlington County.

Watch Stopped at 1 A. M.

The body was discovered, according to the police, by Webly W. Downs, of 506 North Jefferson street, Arlington, as he was on his way to work about 6:16 a. m. yesterday.

According to the police, Clement, with Ernest C. Darden, another employe of the dairy, had gone to Vienna Thursday night to attend a dance, but Darden did not return with Clement. When found by the police, Clement's watch had stopped at 1 a. m.

Found in Clement's pocket was an address of 327 Second street northeast. The records at the dairy show he is from Greensboro, N. C., where he has a brother, Adam Clement.

A Government mathematician who lives near the scene of the accident last night applied his figures to the facts of Clement's crash. He said the horizontal distance between the wrecked car and the highway showed that it had made the 28-foot drop (vertical distance) in 1.323 seconds. The bird line of 63 feet, the expert said, indicated Clement was traveling at the rate of 42.6 feet a second, the equivalent of 29 miles an hour.

Clarion Gray, 53, of Hyattsville, Md., and Leon Giles, colored, 60, of Brentwood, Md., were knocked down by an automobile last night while standing in a street car loading zone at Thirty-fourth street and Rhode Island avenue, Mount Rainier.

At Casualty Hospital, Gray was said to be suffering from back injuries and Giles from internal and head injuries.

WifeSues Phil Furr For Maintenance

Phil Furr, Washington fighter who is rated one of the ten top welterweights of the country, was sued for maintenance in the District Court yesterday by Mrs. Mary Ditoto Furr, whose petition said he deserted her April 21, 1939.

The complaint said they were married in Alexandria, Va., June 20, 1932, and that since the separation Furr has contributed nothing to Mrs. Furr's support, although he makes $7,500 a year as a fighter.

The complaint asks alimony and that the husband be required to pay for medical care needed by his wife. Mrs. Furr lives at 465 H street southeast. She gave her husband's address as 511 Eleventh street northwest.

Highway Race Lands 5 in Jail

Five Washington men were in an Elizabeth, N. J., jail yesterday endeavoring to raise the price of their fines after what State police said was a race of Indianapolis Speedway proportions along Route 25. They were delivering five automobiles to a used car dealer in Newark.

The men gave their names as Richard Brooks, 408 H street northwest; William Fields, 989 Florida avenue northwest; Herbert Graham and William Davis, 1757 Willard street northwest, and William Parker, 1751 T street northwest.

Brooks, Fields, Graham and Davis pleaded guilty to charges of reckless driving and were fined $20 each. Parker pleaded not guilty, was convicted and fined $25.

Student Finds Tiny Pistol Can Shoot

The education of Edward Valentine, 16, student at Gonzaga High School, advanced painfully yesterday. He learned that watch-fob-size pistols can fire cartridges and has an injured left thumb as a case in point.

Valentine, who lives at 3728 T street northwest, was attending class yesterday, meditatively twirling his key ring around his fingers. The inch-long pistol, attached to the ring, struck his thumb, and abruptly there was a shot.

Teacher, students and Edward looked around to discover that the tiny gun had fired a blank cartridge wad and that Valentine's thumb had been hit.

Grand Jury Given Narcotic Case

Edward R. Daniels, 33, was held to the grand jury yesterday on 22 counts of violating narcotic laws, by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Arrested Thursday afternoon by Detective Sergts. Robert Bryant and H. H. Carper and Federal agents, Daniels pleaded not guilty and waived preliminary hearing. Bail was set at $1,500.

Bryant said nearly an ounce of heroin was confiscated. The defendant said he lived at 1256 Oates street northeast.

U. S. S. Augusta Hits Rock Off Philippines

Senate Passes Trade Pacts Bill

dent earlier in the day. It would be very harmful to the Nation, said the President, if the trade agreements issue had to be brought up again in the first year of whatever administration is in office in 1941.

It was best to talk about the proposal from the point of view of the national good, which, he said, was a novel point of view in Washington in a campaign year. The President added that it would be a very bad thing for the country if tariff considerations were brought up every year.

Secretary Hull also denounced the one-year proposal as "utterly unfeasible."

The only 100 per cent New Dealer to vote against final passage of the trade agreements extension was Senator Pepper, of Florida, who had attempted vainly to amend the bill to restrict the importation of agricultural commodities that compete with American products.

The other opposition votes were from the 20 Republicans on the floor, 11 Western Democrats, three Eastern Democrats (Gerry, of Rhode Island; Maloney, of Connecticut, and Holt, of West Virginia), and two Farmer-Laborites.

Holman Shouted Down

An amendment proposed by Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, to exempt agricultural tariffs from changes in future trade agreements lost by a vote of 43 to 38.

The Senate shouted down proposals of Senator Holman (Republican), of Oregon, to abrogate all trade agreements after June 12, 1943, and Senator Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, to create a five-man commission to study the tariff problem.

Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, was beaten 52 to 21, on an attempt to restrict reduction on sugar tariffs, while the same fate, on a vote of 48 to 30, met the efforts of Senator Gurney (Republican), of South Dakota, to terminate all agreements affecting manganese pending revision of present duties.

Rider Also Rejected

At the very last moment before the vote on final passage, Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, offered a rider dealing with taxation of State officials. Although Senator Harrison protested against consideration of the measure at that time, Senator Wiley refused to withdraw the amendment, remarking that "it will at least get some publicity." His proposal was defeated on a standing vote.

Senate Roll Call

The roll call by which the Senate voted a three-year extension of the reciprocal trade program:

Red Cross Sends More Medical Aid to Finns

The Red Cross has sent 80,950 pounds of operating room equipment, hospital supplies and warm garments for aid to 40,000 Finnish war wounded as an addition to large previous shipments, it was announced yesterday.

The cargo forwarded contained 672 water sterilizers, 1,500 instrument trays and 122,551 surgical dressings. The Red Cross has spent $333,273 for Finnish relief, of which $25,000 was expended for surgical instruments alone, it was stated.

they "are not foreclosing" on any moves Dr. Sayer may find necessary.

Interior officials said the choice of Dr. Sayers had been made after an extensive survey, and it was believed their next move would be to place the appointment on a permanent basis. The position pays $9,000 a year.

Since entering the Government service in 1914, Dr. Sayers has been continuously an employe of the Public Health Service, but he was detailed to the Bureau of Mines for 15 years. He directed health and safety work of the bureau from 1917 to 1932.

He left the office when the bureau took over direction of its own safety operations in 1932, and since then has been in charge of industrial hygiene and sanitation for the Public Health Service.

Dr. Sayers, a native of Crothersville, Ind., is a graduate of the Universities of Indiana and Buffalo. Before entering the Public Health Service he was professor of elctro chemistry at Buffalo University.

Secretary Ickes announced that Dr. Sayers would take over the post immediately. Dr. Sayers last night was en route from New York to Washington.

Washington spokesmen for the American Mining Congress, and the Bituminous Coal Research, Inc., declined specific comment on Sayers' appointment. Their response, however, was indicated in such descriptions as these:

"He is well known and well liked personally in the industry."

"He is known as an able administrator."

Dr. Sayers is a member of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, the American Gas Association, the medical committee of the International Association of Industrial Accident Boards and Commissions, and other groups. He has written several publications on mining and metallurgy.

Life-and-Death Fight of Insects Held Necessary

Brayton Eddy, State entomologist and founder of the insect zoo at Goddard Park, Rhode Island, last night lectured before the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall. He illustrated his lecture with motion pictures of insects in "monster" size, and natural color slides.

The pictures showed the daily struggle between insects and their enemies, a conflict which the speaker said, despite its seeming ruthlessness, was essential to the maintenance of a biological balance.

On the theory that man will not kill what he appreciates and does not fear, the speaker stressed the need for a broader public knowledge of insects and their enemies. Only thus can be recognized the value to man of such species as the calosoma beetles and praying mantis, skunks, crows and snakes, as well as other misunderstood creatures, he said.

SEC Investigating Georgia Power Co.

Power, which, it is understood, involves financial statements filed with the commission over a period of several years. The investigation is being handled by the SEC legal division.

The President was asked at his press conference about Willkie's remark, made in an address Thursday before a Town Hall audience in New York, that he understood New Deal officials had threatened to "get" him "if it is the last thing we ever do."

Some of the reporters present laughed at the question, and the President commented that the laughter itself might be regarded as an answer to Willkie.

Meanwhile, Preston Arkwright, president of Georgia Power, said at Atlanta that he had heard nothing about the SEC investigation.

"I can't imagine what it would be," he declared.

Willkie had said in the New York speech that a file on his utterances and activities was being kept in Washington.

He declared he was not a Presidential candidate, although he would accept the Republican nomination if offered it.

SEC officials said they had no file on Willkie, never had had one, and did not intend to prepare one.

Asked in Boston about his political intentions, Willkie remarked that he was "not running for anything nor running away from anything."

Talks of Smear

In his speech, he accused the Administration of "smearing" business. He criticized, in particular, the "dark legend" which, he said, "has slowly destroyed the confidence of the people in American industry . . . has made it impossible for the American businessman to obtain the capital which he needs for his enterprises, to build the plants and to employ the men required for expanding industry."

The "dark legend," he declared, has continued for almost eight years. Politicians, he said, "brewed a kind of witch's broth out of a pot of horror and smeared it all over American enterprise."

By means of sinister rumors," he argued, the Administration "has created a Government-made depression."

"The economic suffering of the American people today is not the fault of industry," he declared. "It is primarily the fault of Government.

"We shall not provide jobs for the workers of America, new products for the consumers of America, and new expanding enterprises for the investors of America until the dark legend against American business is destroyed."

Willkie conceded that some businessmen had been guilty of dishonesty and abuses.

"You will encounter abuses in both industry and Government in the future," he declared. "Dreadful as it may be, we must face the possibility that we shall come upon some man somewhere, sometime, who will be doing something wrong.

"It is hardly good practice to kill the patient in order to prevent recurrence of the disease."

Sponor Concede Probable Changes As Hearings Close

tem and eventually all types of private business enterprises."

"There is more involved in the philosophy underlying this bill than the relief of agriculture," he told the committee. He said the country's major farm organizations have protested "the emasculation of this credit system which the farmers themselves have laboriously built up and successfully managed for 25 years."

Representative Walter M. Pierce (Democrat), of Oregon, who has defended the bill through four weeks of hearings, told Wiggins, "I am not surprised when bankers oppose lower interest rates." The Jones bill cut Federal farm loan interest rates, now 3½ and 4 per cent, to 3 per cent.

Creation of the land bank system in 1916 was fought by "the same interests that are now so stirred up about preserving this system," Pierce remarked.

Wiggins said he realized that any opposition to the bill from bankers might be construed as the expression of "a desire to maintain high interest rates for the benefit of private capital."

"In the public interest, however, we cannot remain silent in the face of an attack on the integrity of credit and the introduction of unsound policies into the operation of the agricultural credit system of the country," he continued.

Lists "Dangerous" Provisions

As the most "dangerous" provisions of the Jones bill he listed the Government guarantee of land bank bonds, prohibition of deficiency judgments against land bank borrowers and establishment of a statutory right to scaling down of mortgage indebtedness.

The section of the bill banning deficiency judgments is expected to draw heavy fire when the committee takes up the legislation in executive sessions next week. Several witnesses have described the proposal as "the abolition of personal liability." The section has been repeatedly condemned by opponents of the measure, while Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who approves the bulk of the bill, told the committee that feature caused him "some concern."

Earlier yesterday Charles H. Mylander, Ohio banker and a director of the Louisville district of the Farm Credit Administration, charged that the Jones bill would "destroy completely" the land bank system.

Mylander said most of the delinquency on land bank loans was concentrated in the Western drought area. "Special measures" may be necessary to relieve distress in this region, he said, but he added that "my friends out there say, 'give us two years of good rain and we'll pay all our debts.'"

Borrowers Discouraged, He Says

"Give hell two years of rain," replied Representative Cummings (Democrat), of Colorado, "and it would be pretty good country, too."

Representative Pierce said that in the Pacific Northwest the land banks "are getting only the weaker loans that the insurance companies don't want." Borrowers are discouraged from applying to the land banks, he said, because of the requirement that they must take 5 per cent of their loan in capital stock. The Jones bill would free the borrower from this obligation.

"If you repeal the 5 per cent requirement, you abolish the land bank system," Mylander replied.

"Oh, my stars," said Pierce, "that is the purest nonsense."

Mylander urged restoration of the Farm Credit Administration to independent status. The agency was transferred to the Agriculture Department by President Rosevelt's reorganization order.

Other witnesses testifying against the Jones bill yesterday were A. G. Brown, former president of the Louisville land bank and now deputy manager of the American Bankers Association, and Paul H. Houston, vice president of the People's Savings Bank, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Confirmation Not Required

Casey, who long has been associated with farm groups, also is a consulting engineer with offices in Washington. His appointment to the FCA post by President Roosevelt does not require Senate confirmation.

He is a director of the American Farm Bureau and Maryland Farm Bureau Federation. He is also president of the Western Maryland National Farm Association, and was formerly a consultant with the old Resettlement Administration.

Casey is the second State leader in the attempted "purge" to receive a Federal appointment. Kent Mullikin, of Laurel, who was State chairman of the "Lewis for Senate" drive, was named State director for the Federal Housing Administration.

Lewis also was given a Federal appointment, being named to the National Mediation Board.

will be absent on maneuvers in the South.

The presence of the President in the reviewing stand depends upon whether the White House physician advises it, according to Col. Edwin S. Bettelheim, jr., adjutant general of the Military Order of the World War, which sponsors the parade.

Army Day, observed nationally and highlighted by the great parade in the Nation's Capital, is annually proclaimed by the President, under Congressional resolution authorizing use of the Army in appropriate ceremonies each April 6.

President Greets Forces

The President's thanks and congratulations to the officers and enlisted men of the Army went out today. A Presidential proclamation, he said, designated April 6 as Army Day, "and I wish to add my personal greetings to the military forces.

"Last September I called upon the officers and men of the Army to strengthen our national defenses within the limits of peacetime authorizations. The Army has made a splendid response to this direction," he said.

"At considerable personal sacrifice, the members of the National Guard carried out a special period of field training during the early weeks of the winter. At the same time the troops of the regular establishment were largely concentrated in the field, where they are still engaged in a strenuous program of training.

"Enduring a winter of unusual severity and of floods and other difficulties and discomforts, the regular soldier has accepted the hardships without complaint, and has pursued his work enthusiastically and with the highest morale," he said.

The garrisons of the insular possessions "have displayed similar energy and efficiency in perfecting the outlying defenses of this country. My thanks and congratulations go to every organization of the Army."

Fair weather has been predicted for today, and this, coupled with the event being held on a Saturday, was expected by Col. Bettelheim to draw a record crowd.

Seats Available

Seats for the public will be available just west of Fourteenth street. These, numbering about 5,000, may be bought for 50 cents or 99 cents at the Military Order's headquarters, 1700 I street northwest; the American Automobile Association, Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, and the Keystone Automobile Club, 1643 Connecticut avenue northwest. One block of the seats is immediately west of Fourteenth street, while four other blocks will be available farther west and nearer the reviewing stand.

The parade, to be divided into four main divisions, will be served by Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons, commanding general of the Third Corps Area. The four divisions are listed officially as: 1, Army, Navy and Marine Corps, embracing the regular service units; 2, National Guard; 3, Organized Reserves, R. O. T. C. and Cadets, and 4, Veteran and Patriotic Organizations. Thirty-one musical organizations will appear.

During Army Day, details of more than 430 policemen, including 6 inspectors and 10 captains, have been assigned to duty, it was announced by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent. The details will be stationed all along the line of march and at the places of forming and disbandment.

Traffic will be blocked from the parade route at 1:35 p. m. and cross traffic will be prohibited while the parade is in progress.

The Army Day banquet, sponsored by the Military Order of the World War, will begin at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Mayflower Hotel. Secretary of War Woodring will give the principal speech. Other speakers will be Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, U. S. A.; Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations; Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps, and others.

Summary of Parade

The Army Day parade will form at the area bounded by Second street southeast, Delaware, Virginia and Independence avenues southwest. It will move at 1:45 p. m. along New Jersey avenue and B street southeast, to Constitution avenue and west on that thoroughfare to disband at Seventeenth street northwest.

The head of the parade is due to reach Fourteenth street and Constitution avenue at 2:05 p. m.

Station PDS Presents Military Band

The brass section of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band, directed by Leon Brusiloff, will play on the PDS program this morning. Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, will interview members of the band during the program. These special features are being arranged in connection with the Metropolitan Police Boys Club drive for funds and members. The program will be heard over Station WMAL.

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Stores Studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each weekday morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in cooperation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Christian Front Counter-Revolt Plan Revealed

Court Told of Plot In Expected Rebellion By Communists

Copyright by New York Times

Brooklyn, April 5.—The 17 defendants now on trial in Federal Court were pictured today as having been in training to become squad leaders through a long period of disorder and street fighting, which they expected would culminate in a Communist revolution, and a counter-revolution in which the Christian Front would take over the United States Government.

Seated almost directly beneath the folds of an American flag which stood beside the witness chair, Denis A. Healy, expert machine gunner, of the New York National Guard, testified he had attended numerous meetings of the alleged plotters, meanwhile keeping the Federal Bureau of Investigation informed from day to day of every development.

Healy told at length of how conspirators had urged him to steal dynamite with which to bomb the Daily Worker, and had promised to have policement on duty nearby to expedite the getaway of the bomber.

Large numbers of policemen, firemen and members of the military and naval services were members of the anti-Semitic, anti-Communist group, according to Healy, who said that he had been informed last fall that its membership was already 300,000 and was growing by "leaps and bounds."

Healy said that he had been assured by William Gerald Bishop, one of the 17 defendants on trial, that certain officers of the New York National Guard, including Brig. Gen. Alexander E. Anderson, Lieut. Col. Martin H. Meany, of the 165th Infantry, and Capt. John T. Prout, jr., of the same regiment, had told him that when the revolution came they would "hold the armories for the Christian Front."

Anderson is commanding officer of the Ninety-third Infantry Brigade of the New York National Guard. Meaney is also fifth deputy police commissioner. Capt. Prout is one of the defendants on trial.

Robert Charles Sullivan (left), Catholic University student, winner of a $250 prize in an essay contest sponsored by the American Patent Law Association, is congratulated by William B. Kerkam, association president, and Conway P. Coe, commissioner of patents

$250 Award in National Contest Goes to R. C. Sullivan in Celebration Of Service's 150th Anniversary

A Catholic University freshmen was selected yesterday as winner of a $250 student essay contest sponsored by the American Patent Law Association.

The winner is Robert Charles Sullivan, 21, of 4351 Forty-fourth street northwest, first-year engineering student. His essay on "The History of the American Patent System and Its Economic Advantages" was chosen in a nation-wide competition, part of the program commemorating the 150th anniversary of the first national patent legislation.

Sullivan, a native of the District and a graduate of Western High School, had one year of pre-legal work at Georgetown University before transferring to engineering. Last semester he was elected to Pi Eta Sigma, honorary scholastic fraternity for freshmen.

The prize will be presented tonight at the Willard, where the Patent Office Society will mark the anniversary with a dinner-dance to begin at 7.

Speakers will include Patent Commissioner Coe; William P. Kerkam, association president; Representative Charles Kramer (Democrat), of California; Finis J. Garrett, presiding judge, Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, and three assistant patent commissioners, Justin W. Macklin, Leslie Frazer, and Henry Van Arsdale. A banquet at the Mayflower Wednesday night will climax the celebration.

Greatest of Eas Noted in Flight Of Stratoliner

45,000-Pound Plane Stays at 12,000 Feet In Demonstration

Substratosphere flying is anything but the rugged, reckless, risky business the name migh suggest, a mild taste of it proved yesterday.

As experienced in the Pan American Airways' new clipper ship, at any rate, high altitude flying is as comfortable as swinging in a hammock, so cozy, in fact, that the only thing preventing ennui is the novelty of looking down, instead of up, at the clouds.

The "stratoliner," which arrived here Monday night and leaves tomorrow to go into the Central and South American transport service, made seven sampler flights yesterday for the entertainment and enlightenment of some 210 military men and civilians.

Arriving at Bolling Field for flight No. 6, you checked in at the hangar, waited a few minutes while the 45,000-pound ship was refueled and then climbed aboard.

Never Above 12,000 Feet

At 4:25 p. m. the Flying Cloud, her four motors (1,100 horses each) warmed up, began taxiing for a takeoff and before you got settled in an overstuffed seat you were 1,000 feet above Gravelly Point, across the Potomac.

When you came aboard it was the supposition that each of the 31 passengers would be fitted with oxygen masks, to be turned on when the ship reached the 3-mile level or thereabouts. But there were no masks and you never got above 12,000 feet.

"The supercharger takes care of the oxygen supply," a steward explained.

"Up to 20,000 feet or so the atmospheric pressure in the cabin is about the same as it is on the ground. Above that point, it is modified something like this: At 25,000 feet the pressure inside the ship is the same as if you were 16,000 feet aloft. At 29,000 feet, it would be 20,000 inside, and so on, a 9,000-foot pressure differential."

Although the Flying Cloud, in this 35-minute sampler flight, kept her nose at a mere 2-mile level, the supercharger was functioning just the same, the steward said.

Over Fairfax County, Va., the stratoliner flew above a sea of silvery clouds which, if one may judge by comments overheard during the trip, was the biggest thrill of an otherwise uneventful demonstration.

The 11 trips made by the Flying Cloud since her arrival at Bolling Field Monday—four Thursday and seven yesterday—accommodated 337 Army and Navy officers, diplomats, members of Congress, Civil Aeronautics Authority members and employes, Postoffice Department officials and others successful in obtaining tickets.

Credit to Army, Navy

Among the samplers were Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff; Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps, and Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics.

Juan T. Trippe, president of Pan American Airways, credits the Army and Navy for pioneering work in substratosphere flying which helped pave the way to development of the oBeing "stratoliner."

A special Army Day exhibition of the huge ship will be held at Bolling Field from 2 to 4 p. m. today. There will be no more emonstration .ights, however, before the Flying Cloud takes off at 6 a. m. tomorrow for New Orleans, flying nonstop. After a short stay there it will continue to Brownsville, Tex., whence it will enter the Central American transport service.

3d Complaint Bewilders Dog Owner

4 Good Canines Get Mrs. Burche Into Court Again

Good dogs may make bad neighbors, realizes Mrs. Helen Elizabeth Burche, of 2027 H street northwest, who will appear at the corporation counsel's office a third time today to try to solve the dog-neighbor problem.

The four dogs in her home are good, she knows.

"If they were noisy dogs I couldn't keep my six roomers," she protested yesterday. She said the roomers have all been there "a good long time, and not one word of complaint out of them."

She was released on $100 bail yesterday after being arrested on a warrant sworn to by Mrs. Hannah Seaquist, of 2025 H street northwest.

Mrs. Burche doesn't think Mrs. Seaquist is a bad neighbor. "We used to get along right well," she said.

Mrs. Seaquist made no comment.

Mrs. Burche declared she owns only two dogs—Ranger and Snow White—smooth-haired terriers. A puppy she is giving to a friend in Bethesda, Md., next week, she says. The fourth dog, Peaches, is a large black friendly animal who rolls on his back and grins at everyone.

"I just haven't the heart to let him go," sighed Mrs. Burche, "but I guess I'll have to. I got him from an old colored man who wasn't taking the right care of him. But I'll have to give him back."

It's this love of some old dog no one wants that has taken Mrs. Burche into court twice before, she says. She can't understand why the neighbors won't like both her and her dogs at the same time.

Minnesota Senators To Receive Banners

Senators Ernest Lundeen and Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, will be presented with banners bearing the great seal of their home State at the Army Day dance of the Minnerota State Society, tonight at the Hotel 2400. The flags are gifts from groups of war veterans in Minneapolis, and will be presented by Charles W. Curran, commander of the Internal Revenue Post of the American Legion.

French Map in Welles Picture Is Work of Soldier-Printer

Paris Explains Revision of Frontiers That Outraged Berlin; 1919 Chart Was Kept Up to Date by Reynaud

Paris, April 5.—The man who drew in the frontiers of Europe on the map which appeared on the cover of L'Illustration does not yet know anything about the international excitement that his handiwork has caused.

Chapter one of the story might be entitled French economy, for the map in question was printed in 1919 and the French finance ministry had never been able to afford to buy another despite the alterations Adolf Hitler had effected in the European frontiers. Being a practical man, Premier Reynaud had done his best to bring the old map up to date by coloring all Germany's acquisitions with red chalk, and the new Russia, yellow.

He had made other marks on the map as was shown when it was produced today for the inspection of foreign newspapermen and photographers, but these other marks did not show on the photograph taken during Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles' visit.

Printer Drew Some Lines

Chapter two might be entitled "The Hand of the Censor," for that photograph, like all others, had to pass through the censorship, and the censor was perturbed because the yellow and red chalk markings of M. Reynaud came out black in the photograph and made Russia and Germany look like a solid black unit. That, in the censor's opinion, might lead to misunderstanding, so he helpfully ordered that the photograph be all colored grey. This was done and the photograph prepared for the cover of L'Illustration. Some copies were in fact printed.

Then began chapter three, the hero of whcih was a French printer, who is mobilized but, like many others, had gone back to his job during his leave. His professional mind could not tolerate a map of Europe with no frontier lines. It looked like bad workmanship so he drew some in. It was roughly done in diagram fashion but it looked better in his opinion and pleased with his work and his pay, he went back to his unit.

Even France Changed

Chapter four discovers some sleuth at work in Berlin searching for infromation useful to his government. His trained German eye spotted at once something wrong with these frontiers. They were most suspicious. There must have been much excitment in the Propaganda Ministry when the discoery was made. Here was something really important, for photographs never lie. Reynaud was telling Welles how Europe was to be remade and had thoughtfully prepared a map which incidentally changed even the frontiers of France. The foreign press was caled in and the denunciation made.

In Italy, there was as much excitement as in Berlin. In the press and over the radio comment has been poured out in an ever increasing cascade. Back and forwards across the Atlantic queries have gone asking just what this map might be.

Chapter five returns to France and its dilatory habits. Nobody took this piece of enemy propaganda seriously. It wsa dismissed with a casual denial. But the snow ball kept on growing and so at last today, the original map wsa produced at the quai d'orsay, the original photographs were shown, and a full explanation given.

Powers to Take Off Kid Gloves, Swedes Fear

Expect Blow 'Below Belt' in Belligerent Handling of Neutrals

United Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, Sweden, April 5.—Swedish political and industrial circles, complaining that the belligerent powers have "now decided to hit below the belt," expressed acute fears tonight that the economic struggle between Germany and the Allies may involve Sweden in the war.

There is growing feeling in political quarters that both Britain and Germany are on the point of abandoning the last vestiges of "kid glove diplomacy" in dealing with the neutrals, particularly the Scandinavian states.

"The big powers at war now have decided to hit below the belt," said a prominent Swedish industrialist.

Concern as to whether the new Allied-German struggle on the economic front will permit Sweden to remain neutral was based on:

Efforts of the British to keep Swedish iron ore from reaching Germany.

The increased influence of British First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill over Britain's war strategy, particularly in view of his known aggressive character.

The approach of warm weather which is expected to restore shipping in the Gulf of Bothnia in about three weeks and perhaps lead to armed action there, possibly in the form of British air attacks, if Germany tries to move ore from Swedish Bothnian ports to Baltic ports.

Should the belligerents adopt new policies of warfare, Sweden will resist with every means at her disposal all attempts by either side to "smoke her out" of her neutrality and will continue to strengthen her defenses, it was stated here on authority.

Sweden insists upon the right to sell her iron ore to both sides, in comformity with existing trade agreements.

British Laborite To Discuss China

The Barnard College Club of Washington today will hear Sir Stafford Cripps, British labor leader, discuss the system of industrial cooperatives in China, at a 1:30 p. m. luncheon meeting in the Mayflower.

Sir Stafford, who recently toured China and India, will describe activities of the cooperatives in aiding refugees who fled to the interior of free China. Mrs. Eugene Meyer will be chairman.

Club members and friends of China, unable to attend the luncheon, may come for the talk which will follow. Admission fee will be 50 cents.

Paroled Forger Sent Back to Jail

His probation revoked, Adelard P. Fortin, 45, must serve 12 to 24 months in jail for forging a $16.33 check on the Catholic Charities organization which gave him work as a painter a year ago.

Justice Peyton Gordon reinstated the sentence in District Court yesterday on recommendation of Probation Officer Joseph Y. Reeves. Reeves told the Court that since being released last June 30 Fortin has committed other offenses and was sentenced to a total of 240 days in jail March 16 for four instances of obtaining property by false pretenses.

Nazi Film Shows Diplomats How British Ruined Warsaw

'All Chamberlain's Work,' Commentator Explains as Horrors of Invasion Unreel; Goering Threatens Allies With Same Fate

Berlin, April 4 (AP).—United States and other foreign diplomats and military attaches were treated tonight to a sensational motion picture account of the German aerial blitzkrieg in Poland, interlarded with a vocal commentary placing the blame on England.

The bombing and shelling of Warsaw was shown in gri mdetail, then the voice from the screen asked:

"What do you say now, Mr. Chamberlain? Don't you feel the curse? All this is your work."

Field Marshal Hermann Goering and Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels were present at the showing, but Adolf Hitler was not there, because of the policy of not having the No. 1 and No. 2 leaders of the Reich at the same time in the same building, in case something happened to it.

Goering appeared in the film for a brief speech in which he said the German air force had "demonstrated in Poland that it could do what it promised and that promise will now be kept in France and England. We will vanquish and destroy the enemy."

Alexander Kirk, United States Charge d'Affaires, was present with the American military and naval attaches.

Film Horrifies Rome

Rome, April 5.—The German embassy last night gave a private showing of the Reichs' new propaganda film on the conquest of Poland to a cold and silent audience of Italians who incurred a great mapority of the highest officials. The only applause from beginnin gto end came when the Bremen was shown entering Hamburg after speeding through the British blockade.

The picture was not intended to inspire good-will for Germany, it was said, but to strike terror, and from that viewpoint, it was a great success. The audience, in fact, seemed to have been horrified.

Moscow Radio Opens Attack On Norway

Scandinavia Fearful As Soviets Demand President Resign

By International News Service

Copenhagen, April 5.—The Moscow radio tonight launched a bitter attack on the Norwegian government. It demanded the resignation of Carl J. Hambro, president of the Norwegian Storting (Parliament), on the grounds he is pursuing an anti-Soviet policy.

The Soviet radio blast electrified Scandinavia, still shaken by the effects of the Russo-Finnish peace.

It aroused fears of a new crisis that may threaten to convert Norway and Sweden into a battleground between the Soviet-German camp on the east and south and the Anglo-French bloc on the west.

The German short-wave radio, according to a broadcast picked up in New York by the Columbia listening post, quoted a Danish newspaper as reporting the Allied general staffs are planning to land troops in Norway.)

Hambro was attacked by the Moscow radio because he is the strongest prominent advocate of a Nordic defense alliance among Norway, Sweden and Finland. Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff has warned such a pact would be deemed to violate the Russo-Finnish peace treaty.

It was learned, meanwhile, that full diplomatic relations between Russia and Finland are about to be resumed. Ivan Zotov, presently Soviet minister to Latvia, has been named new minister to Finland. He has already been summoned to Moscow to receive instructions.

Ninety Nines Pay Tribute Tonight To Amelia Earhart

The Ninety-Nines, international association of women fliers, will entertain tonight at the Raleigh Hotel in memory of Amelia Earhart, a founder and first president of the organization.

Fulton Lewis, jr., will be master of ceremonies, and "The Flying Waltz," arranged especially by the Arthur Murray School of Dancine, will be demonstrated.

Guests of honor will include Senator and Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Thomas Burke, of the State Department; Thomas Hardin, Air Safety Board, and Mrs. Hardin, Col. Jarvis Butler, secretary, Joint Aeronautical Board; Senator Dennis Chavez, Representative and Mrs. Overton Brooks, Representative and Mrs. Arthur B. Jenks, Gill Robb Wilson, president, National Aeronautical Association; Representative Melvin Maas, Col. Jack Jouett, Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, Representative Caroline O'Day, Jack Frye, president, Transcontinental and Western Air Transport; Senator Arthur Capper, Representative Mary Norton, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry Grady, Representative and Mrs. Phil Ferguson, Col. and Mrs. Sumpter, Senator and Mrs. Sherman Minton, Capt. Corley McDarment, president, Aero Club of Washington; Carl B. Allen, Air Safety Board, and Mrs. Allen, Representative and Mrs. William B. Barry.

American Morals Issue Stymies 'Town Meeting'

The "Town Meeting of The Air" session at the Jewish Community Center Thursday night found itself stymied on the difficult question of whether or not Americans are basically moral—and concluded that it was all a relative matter anyway.

"What seems moral to us may seem the opposite to Polynesians, and vice versa," said Rabbi Ely Pilchick, of Hillel House, Maryland University, chief speaker of the evening. He said morality was a "control mechanism" and that its aspects were different in time of peace than in war.

The audience of 150 applauded the witty version of Dr. Louis Brown, author, whose radio voice was heard as part of the program, that Americans were "most of us trying to live lies; trying to live laws in 1940 that belonged to 1490."

Disabled Veterans To Hold Annual Dance Tomorrow

The outgoing commander, Harry D. Nierenberg, of Rea Chapter, the Disabled Veterans of the World War, will be honored at the association's annual banquet and dance tonight at the National Press Club beginning at 7 p. m.

A number of nationally prominent war veterans are expected at the function, including Walter B. Wanamaker, a judge of Akron, Ohio; Malin Ward, the national service officer of the organization; Fred Cocheli, who holds the Distinguished Service Cross and will represent the American Legion; Dr. H. D. Shapiro, national medical officer of the American Legion, and Thomas Kehoe, former service officer of the American Red Cross.

A dance following the dinner will be open to the public.

CCC Boys, on 7th Anniversary, Unveil Memorial to Fechner

The name of the late Robert Fechner, first director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, was unveiled in bronze yesterday as the seventh anniversary of the CCC was celebrated here and throughout America. The President extended congratulations to the corps.

A small stone monument was dedicated to Fechmner's memory at Camp NP-7 in Fort Dupont here, in the afternoon. Speaking there, in presence of the camp enrollees who built the memorial and paid personally for its bronze plaque, Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, advocated making the CCC a "permanent part of our governmental structure."

James J. McEntee, director of the CCC, Fechner's successor, told the enrollees of Fechner's "courage, patience and devotion" and urged his hearers "to strive to carry on his dream."

Fechner's Humanism Recalled

The monument, in the center of the camp, was unveiled by Senior Leader Frank Papuga, formerly of Martin, Pa., who oversaw the building. Papuga was dressed in the CCC spruce green uniform, which he modeled, in 1939, for the corps. He was introduced by the company commander, Edward G. Davis.

The plaque carries the legend: "In memory of Robert Fechner, First Director, Civilian Conservation Corps, 1933-1939. Dedicated, April, 1940, by CCC Company 2331."

McEntee reminded of how Fechner always spoke of the enrollees ernmental agency, hard work, outstanding ability and earnest humanism."

Accomplishments Listed

President Roosevelt saluted the corps, nationally. Noting that more than 2,400,000 young men have been enrolled in 4,000 camps since 1933, he wrote McEntee:

"Best of all is the fact that, while enjoying the advantages of security, discipline and a well-ordered life, these youngsters have planted more than 1,700,000 trees; have constructed more than 100,000 miles of trails and minor roads; have built 75,000 miles of telephone lines and spent more than 5,000,000 man-days fighting forest fires."

Georgians yesterday asked Congress to authorize erection of a memorial honoring Fechner in the Robert Fechner Memorial Park at Savannah. The resolution was offered by Senators George and Russell and Representative Peterson, of Georgia.

Nazis Proclaim New Phase of War

London hoped for decisive effects from loud-mouthed bluff agitation. All this missed fire.

"Now England—France, which is existing as a Helot nation, need not be mentioned—will strike out. Now the British will brnig money, guns, meanness and violations of law into play. The name of Churchill will be used for a fanfare of piratical attacks against the neutrals' international rights. Now they will reveal themselves as sea robbers. The world will do wel to wacth closely for now it can see England in her true character, and Germany?—wait and see."

English "Protection" Feared

The Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung writes: "The Churchill elevation to supreme minister of the three arms of the fghting forces is, according to the unanimous judgment of non-belligerent nations, proof that a further extension of the imperialistic war will now be seriously attempted. The western powers, from being the alleged defenders small nations, inog since have become the declared enemies of the right to peace and independence everywhere where they thought they would not meet the resistance of big powers.

"A new phase of the war may now begin."

Scandinavia, Russia, Italy and the Balkans, according to the German press, are in a fever of apprehension. The Russian and Italian press are quoted at length as foreseeing imminent action.

The foreign office views, as expressed in Wilhelmstrasse comment, are that the neutrals should take a firm stand against the British before the drive to "protect" them starts.

Center to Stage 4 Plays Tonight

Four more one-act plays will be presented in the third program of the Community Center and Playgrounds Department play tournament at 8 o'clock tonight in the Roosevelt High School.

First on the program will be the Sacred Heart Dramatic Club's production of Emmet Lavery's "The Monsignor's Hour." Other plays to be given include "Her Affairs in Order" by Mada Gage Bolton to be presented by the St. Paul's Players; Edna St. Vincent Millay's "Aria da Capa" with a cast of players directed by Pauline Eaton Oak, and C. C. Carter's "And Now, the Journey" with a cast under William F. Baker's direction.

A fourth preliminary event takes place next Tuesday night, and finals are scheduled for April 13.

'Treasure Ship' Beached—Empty

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, April 5.—When what was supposed to be the wreck of the "treasure ship," the Telemaque, was beached on the Seine shore, near Rouen, today it was discovered to be empty.

Experts must now decide whether the wrong wreck has been raised or the legend that this vessel, sunk in 1790, contained treasure looted by revolutionaries from the Tuileries Palace, was only a myth.

Diamond Mines Found in Urals

Moscow, April 5.—The discovery of valuable diamond mines in the Ural Mountains has been reported today by G. Volosiuk, head of the geological committee of the Council of People's Commissars. Although between 1829 and 1939 only about 200 diamonds have been found in 110 years of search, the geological committee has established that there are seven important diamond fields in the Urals.

Second Flood Crest Passes Harmlessly

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 5 (AP).—A second flood crest spread out harmlessly tonight down the widening valley of the Susquehanna.

After abrupt rises, rain and snow fed headwaters in highlands of upper Pennsylvania and lower New York began dropping steadily. No more rain was expected immediately, and a forecast of colder weather indicated the runoff would be checked. There was little new damage.

Katharine Hepburn, John Garfield, Frances Farmer, Fredric March, Sylvia Sidney all spurned Hollywood for Broadway—and regret it. Louella Parsons tells why they'll find it hard to get back.

These Daily Post Features Come On Sunday, Too!

Marshall Adams, Post fashion editor, always has an illustrated feature article on Sunday, the serial story is continued in Sunday's edition, The Post's news coverage and editorial page are just as fine on Sundays as on weekdays, the comics are even better because they're in color—and there are all kinds of extra things for you in Sunday's Post, too!

AND SUNDAY'S POST also BRINGS YOU THESE MANY added FEATURES!

Legion's Bill Slattery Leads Series On D. C. Organization Heads

The commander of the District of Columbia American Legion is the first subject in a series of Sunday Post personality sketches of leaders of Washington organizations.

The Sunday Post brings you all the news of Washington's veterans' and fraternal organizations: Legion posts and lodges. On the organizations pages also appear Army and Navy and reserve corps news, Norris' column "Service Sidelights, and notes of college alumni groups and State societies.

Sunday's Post Presents Last of Picture Sections on Churches

It takes two typewritten pages to catalogue all the interesting things covered in this Sunday's picture section on churches. They range from babies at St. Ann's Infant Asylum, one of the Catholic charities, to the Gutenberg Bible and the Lincoln pew. Washington has been enthusiastic about these Sunday Post eight-page picture sections, and this third in the series on churches will be of interest to every reader, whatever his church. Don't miss it!

Florence Bankhead Next In Post Series On Possible First Ladies

Her newly-found talent at sculpture interests Mrs. William Bankhead more than the possibility of becoming First Lady. Hope Ridings Miller describes her for you Sunday.

In addition to the daily Post columns which also appear in the society and women's section on Sunday, you'll enjoy these special Sunday Post writers: Novelist Katherine Brush, Carolyn Bell, who writes about diplomats, Betty Beale's "Top Hats and Tiaras," Elizabeth Henney's news of Army and Navy society.

COLUMNISTS GALORE IN THE BIG AMUSEMENT SECTION

Dick Coe's "Radio Highlights" is expanded to almost a page of radio news, comment, and programs on Sunday. Lucie Neville and Jimmie Fidler join Hopper and Parsons in bringing you Hollywood gossip. Lucius Beebe and Richard Watts bring you the New York of celebrities and theater. Weare Holbrook's article is always humorous and so is Damon Runyon's. Music—art—travel—gardens—organizations—hobbies—these, too, appear in Sunday's Amusement section, one of the nine big sections that make the Sunday Post so popular.

The Retirement Age

The Civil Service Commission has repeatedly urged changes in the laws governing the retirement ages of Federal employes. In its current annual report it discusses the subject again, presenting sound arguments for modification of inflexible age limits, especially in the postal service and skilled trades where employes are compulsorily retired at 62 and 65 years of age.

The commission points out that many of these workers are thoroughly competent and some are "at or near their maximum usefulness to the Government." In such cases, their continuance in employment, possibly up to the compulsory age limit of 70 years, would benefit the Government quite as much as the individual. Because of pension claims, moreover, early retirement is costly for the Government.

Of course, given a uniform compulsory retiring age of 70, special provision would have to be made for earlier retirement of employes who by reason of ill-health or premature failure of powers had ceased to be useful.

That could be done, as the commission suggests, through setting an optional retirement age of 60 years for those with 30 years service, and 62 years for persons with 15 years of service. By enabling the Government as well as the individual employe to exercise the retirement option, it would be possible to eliminate incompetents and prevent deterioration of personnel.

If there are any sound arguments against the proposed changes they have not so far been brought to public attention. The greatest danger, perhaps, would lie in a tendency to deal too leniently with individuals who have passed the period of usefulness before reaching the compulsory retirement age. But such employes could usually be induced to exercise their optional pension rights.

Saved By The Senate

The conferees considering appropriation bills before the Congress have a difficult task and special responsibility this year because of the proper insistence on economy and the coincident insistence of special groups that their various projects are particularly meritorious.

The conferees on the Independent Offices Bill have agreed to the Senate proposal for a much reduced appropriation for the National Resources Planning Board next year. But this action at least insures a modest expenditure for research which will probably save the Federal Government many times over the cost of the agency. Every large business organization and industry has found the need for a research or planning group in its executive branch. The Federal Government as our largest business needs a similar unit.

The National Resources Planning Board, it must be remembered, is a joint enterprise in which all of the regular Federal agencies take part. The board operates chiefly through nine major advisory committees which deal with problems conected with land, water, energy resources, public works, science, industry, local planning, population and relief policy.

The membership of the land committee is typical of the composition of these committees. It includes representatives of the Forestry Division, General Land Office, the Department of Interior, Office of Land Use Coordination, Bureau of Agricultural Economics and the Extension Service of the Department of Agriculture. Also included are representatives of various non-Federal organizations.

When continuation of the board was threatened, in other words, more was involved than a small staff organization in Washington. What was jeopardized was a very necessary process of integration among Federal and State agencies. The board has a vital importance in developing that process.

It is not duplicating the type of project planning for improved use of resources that is done by other Federal agencies. It is, however, encouraging and coordinating those activities. In addition to valuable research studies, the board thus brings together the skills of other agencies, to work jointly on fundamental problems which demand the most efficient use of all the resources we can muster.

The continuance of the National Resources Planning Board as an administrative arm of the President's office has been established by the Senate vote on the appropriation. As that body evidently realizes, whatever political party is in power, or whatever the economic theories which may control an Administration, the Government of the future will have need of this organization.

Division In The Ranks

The bill to extend the trade agreements program has successfully run the gauntlet of various emasculating amendments offered from the Senate floor. But the fight for these amendments, led by a Democratic minority, reveals a lack of party unity and an absence of discipline that must be as dismaying to the Democrats as it is comforting to their opponents.

With the help of a solid bloc of Republican votes and the support of a group of Democratic Senators, most of them from the West, Senator Pittman nearly succeeded in putting through an amendment requiring Senate ratification of future reciprocal trade pacts. Senator O'Mahoney followed with an amendment providing for ratification of trade agreements by majority vote of both houses. That, too, was lost by a narrow margin.

Another unacceptable modification of the trade agreements bill, sponsored by Senator McCarran, would have forbidden tariff concessions unless complete protection against lower foreign production costs was assured. The final and most insidious threat to the program came from the proposed amendment, seemingly at least tacitly supported by Vice President Garner, which would have limited the extension of the Hull program to one year.

Passage of any of these suggested amendments would have been a severe blow to the prestige of the Administration. The lack of unity in the Democratic ranks is in any case damaging. It is also especially conspicuous by contrast with the remarkable solidarity of the Republican opposition to extension of the Hull program. In an election year such evidences of intra-party conflict cannot fail to be highly disturbing to Democratic leaders.

Individual instances of nonconformity are to be expected, and ordinarily constitute no threat to party unity or to vote-getting ability. But it is a serious matter when an important group of Senators withhold support from a program unreservedly and enthusiastically indorsed by the President. It is still worse if the Vice President surreptitiously joins forces with those seeking to impair the effectiveness of what his chief is seeking to accomplish.

Internal discord of this kind, due partly to divergent economic interests of different sections and partly to personal rivalries, is a great handicap to a party making a bid for continued support of the electorate. It is difficult to make an effective appeal for votes on the basis of the Administration's past record when party members have openly expressed disapproval of a fundamental part of that record.

Moreover, dissension within the ranks causes the public to question the value of promises of future performance which might be repudiated by a dissident minority.

He Made No Statement

A controversy which may interest Mr. Farley in more ways than one is lurking in the contemplated issuance of a postage stamp commemorating the "first use of ether as an anesthesia" by Crawford W. Long, a physician of Georgia, in 1842.

In the first place it appears that ether as an anesthesia was in use years before Dr. Long was born. What the Postoffice intends to memorialize is the discovery of ether anesthesia as applied to surgery.

According to the record, credit for this can be claimed by two Yankee dentists: Dr. Horace Wells, of Hartford, and Dr. William Morton, of Boston. Dr. Wells announced his discovery in 1844, Dr. Morton in 1846. As for Dr. Long, he made no announcement or claim until 1849. A wait of seven years, so the embattled dentists contend, negates Dr. Long's claim to such immortality as is embodied in a postage stamp.

According to the Journal of the American Dental Association, a discovery is not a discovery until it is publicly demonstrated and proclaimed. And if Mr. Farley can point to a statue to Dr. Long in the Congressional Hall of Fame, the dentists can respond by mentioning Dr. Morton's bust in New York University's Hall of Fame and the monument of Dr. Wells erected by the State of Connecticut.

Sectionalism, States rights and professional pride are all clearly involved in the controversy. But perhaps the moral for the Postmaster General will be primarily political. Dr. Long's claims are contested because he waited too long in making a public announcement. And Mr. Farley is in an excellent position to realize that undue delay in the making of vital public announcements is no reason for holding up the interest of others.

Flattering Hitler

On this anniversary of America's entry into the last great war one hears little about making the world safe for democracy. The after-effects of 1914-18 destroyed the illusion that a devastating conflict can accomplish that. But this war has brought with it a new version of the older slogan. Today we are told that the Allied powers are fighting against the forces of totalitarianism which threaten to engulf democratic institutions.

Most of us with good reason believe that is, indeed, the aim of the French and the British in waging war against Germany. However, there is a great and growing danger that under the pressure of abnormal wartime conditions the champions of democracy will themselves become exponents of dictatorial and oppressive policies.

Reports that the French government is preparing to issue a decree branding Communist propaganda as "treason," punishable by death, shows the extremes to which a democratic country may be driven in its resolve to suppress defeatist sentiment. Already 36 Communist deputies have been arrested, tried by a military court and sentenced to serve prison terms. Nine other deputies have been convicted of treason in absentia. These wholesale methods of arrest and conviction savor strongly of the execrated mass trials conducted by totalitarian governments.

It has to be remembered that the French Communist Party, which was banned at the outbreak of the war, polled 15 per cent of all votes cast in the general election of four years ago. At that time they secured 72 seats in the Chamber of Deputies. However much of a menace the party may seem, therefore, it has, or has had, the support of a very substantial body of French citizenry.

At this distance it is difficult to judge the extent of the provocation which induced the French government to take such drastic means of suppressing anti-war propaganda. But it is easy to understand why freedom of speech is among the cherished democratic rights that are usually forgotten in great national emergencies.

If reports are to be trusted, the French are preparing to issue a decree imposing sentence of death upon anyone who prepares, supplies or assembles for distribution "defeatist propaganda documents." If that is the case, we are forced to conclude that democracy in France is threatened with temporary extinction. The fault lies not with the defenders of democratic institutions, but with the exigencies of modern war, which cannot possibly be vigorously prosecuted without wholesale suppression of individual rights.

Real News

Strange beyond fathoming are the ways of Homo Sapiens. Thursday, at Madison Square Garden, a group of physicians and veterinarians worked for hours to save the life of a dying Syberian snow leopard. Tank after tank of oxygen, and dose after dose of adrenalin were expended in an effort to save the poor brute. And when this effort was seen to be in vain, great was the grief of everyone connected with the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus.

The proximate cause of this tragedy was the fact that the Siberian leopard called Doushka (a Russian term of endearment) had got the worst of a fight with his cage mate, an Indian leopard. There had, according to the circus people, been bad blood between the two for months. Possibly the question at issue was one of Lebensraum, although the cage was said to have been quite comfortable for two.

In any event the phenomenon was so extraordinary as to be given respectful attention on the front pages of the New York newspapers, thereby relegating to inside obscurity some more recent instances of wholesale and retail slaughter of man by man. In short, the story about the two leopards had in high degree the quality which editors with unconscious humor call "human interest."

And perhaps there is a moral in it somewhere. Perhaps it is time to revise the classic definition about what constitutes a good newspaper story. Nowadays, reports about human beings who behave like wild animals evoke only a yawn, or, at best, a sigh. But when wild animals behave like human beings—boy, that's news!

What Would "Confucius Say?"

From the Christian Science Monitor

Does any one feel sorry for the Chinese sage who is now being widely mistreated through putting into his mouth many words and sentiments that he never uttered? If somebody wearing a Chinese scholar-costume of 25 centuries ago could reappear and allege that he has been cruelly misquoted, that would be Confucius.

"In style," Confucius averred, "all that is required is that it convey the meaning." Now the regrettable feature of the current fad is the inanity in most of the parodies. However, Confucius might concur in some measure with the modern vogue. "Better be remembered by all," he might say, "than forgotten by all but scholars."

Socialist Appeal

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Perhaps Mrs. Roosevelt can clear up something for us.

In one of her columns some time ago, she urged all young people to join and become active in a political party. Surely, she didn't mean the Democratic or the Republican Party, since neither of these has the real solution to our problems as students and workers: widespread unemployment, job insecurity, and incomes inadequate for proper food, clothing housing and medical care.

Neither political party has the courage to attack the real cause of our ills—the lopping off of wage-earners' purchasing power in the form of profits for industrialists, interest for bankers, dividends for financiers, and rent for landlords.

Can Mrs. Roosevelt have had in mind the Socialist Party? It is the only political party today which is working to place the factories, the banks, railroads and utility companies in the hands of the people.

King's English

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Referring to the Shakespearean line "Damned be him that first cries, etc.," and to Mr. Gene Tunney's scholarly justification of its grammar, may one suggest that it is not properly chargeable to Shakespeare, but to Macbeth? And that perhaps the peerless poet, unable to handle that powerful fictitious character, saw clearly that a man who had just murdered a king, might take a sly and savage pleasure in "Murdering the King's English" (or Scotch).

Macbeth saw that such a grammatical error would shock the cultured MacDuff and throw him off his balance as the duel began; and that such an insult to his king would enrage also that loyal subject, and make him more vulnerable.

What would Mr. Tunney say to "Whence all but he had fled" the burning deck and to the Good Friday hymn, "Who but thou hadst dared to drain?" LEON MACK.

Our Relations With Japan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The fear on the part of some Americans that a firm attitude toward Japan would result in a Japan-Russian tie-up is a consideration from which Japan has attempted to make much capital. The reason, of course, for setting forth this possibility is to weaken the stand of the United States on the Far Eastern situation.

There seems to be no sound basis for such a belief, because of the historical enmity of Japan and Russia, because neither of them, under present circumstances, could possibly gain from such a bargain, and because such a deal would undoubtedly lengthen the mutual borders of the two nations, thereby increasing the complications and the difficulties of defense against each other. Assuming such a deal to be possible, the net result would certainly bring no increase of trust between them.

In the relations of the United States with Japan, as reflected in the reluctance to impose an embargo on the shipment of war materials to that country, there seems to be the desire to maintain Japan as sort of a gendarme in the Far East. The supposition seems to be that Japan will thus be able to keep the U. S. S. R. in check.

However, it seems that a strong, free and independent China, a condition toward which that country has rapidly progressed in recent years, would be the best possible check on the expansion of both Japan and the Soviet Union.

The actual result seems to be that our continued assistance to Japan is only prolonging the war, causing continued sacrifice of life and property, and making it absolutely necessary for China to accept help from the U. S. S. R., with all that this may or may not imply, in order to continue resistance to Japanese aggression. The attitude of the United States is, therefore, facilitating the very developments which we presumably so heartily deplore.

HENRY W. DOUGLAS.
Washington, April 1.

Conant's Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have just read the speech of Attorney General Gordon Conant of Ontario Province, which quite significantly followed a somewhat similar speech of our playboy Ambassador to Canada and which in turn may be followed by many others. I want to go on record now as saying that I and 120,000,000 other Americans are not ready to die for dear old England nor for British imperialism.

We went to war in 1917 to save the world for democracy and just about succeeded in saving it "from" democracy. Now it is suggested that we go in to it for civilization. Shall we also go in and save it "from" civilization?

Contrary to the attorney general's opinion, Mr. Cromwell's speech emphatically does not "express American opinion accurately." Stop anyone in the street, anytime, anywhere, and ask him if he thinks Americans want any part of this war, and if this isn't enough of an answer just go through any of our veterans' hospitals and take a look at the men who are still paying for the last war.

If a country of some 120,000,000 people can be forced into a war against their will by a handful of warmongers and Anglophiles, then where is our democracy? I don't believe it can be done a second time. MAY HEALY.
Edgewater, Md. April 4.

Representing Many Alumni

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Following the publication of your editorial, "Smoke Without Fire," the undersigned self-constituted alumni committee addressed a letter to The Washington Post in which we took issue with the opinion that nothing is seriously wrong at George Washington University and called for a thorough and impartial investigation of conditions there.

The Post published this letter but omitted the name of the committee and printed instead only the name of its agent. The committee naturally inquired about this omission. We find that The Post did not print the name because our committee represents only a fraction of the alumni.

Of course, all the alumni are not members of our committee. All do not even agree with us; but we think that the quantity of correspondence received by The Post and other newspapers in recent weeks shows that many do

Actually, we have not solicited membership widely. Too large a group does not function efficiently. This does not mean that membership is closed to any alumnus sincere in his desire to obtain good administration at George Washington University. Furthermore, we shall always take into consideration expressions of opinion received from interested alumni.

Commands The Manhattan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In reference to Miss Dorothy Thompson's column in The Post of April 3, I wish to inform you that Commodore A. B. Randall is not the commander of the liner S. S. Manhattan. My father, Capt. George V. Richardson, is in command now and has been for some time. Since Miss Thompson did not mention names in her editorial, the mistake was probably made by someone in your "morgue."

Collective Bargaining And The NLRB

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The National Labor Relations Act establishes the right of the United States Government to intercede, in the interest of the whole people, in the ceaseless and fruitless wars between labor and capital.

This right it was unable to assert before the passage of that law but must now press vigorously to the belated solution of many problems.

Approached from this angle the objections of certain employers to collective bargaining because perchance their efforts to hinder and upset the action of the law was met with brusqueness and short-cut action by the NLRB are petulant and frivolous.

They fight only the collective feature of the act. For some reason we hear nothing about the more vital bargaining phase. Collective action is a practical and speedy way in which to organize labor-employer relations for the moves that must be made to save private management for the capitalistic system. If private management dreams it can control the situation by means of private armies and without governmental intercession it is living in fog.

To prevent one side from tyrannizing over the other and over the public in general the Government, as the public's arm, must step in to regulate the defensive and aggressive moves of both sides. No longer can the public's interest be sacrificed to the militant and selfish moods of employer or employe.

This then is the direction which amendment of the Wagner law must take and take immediately. The public is not concerned with the collective feature of the law, but its bargaining provisions are of supreme interest.

Are the bargains arrived at actually a gang up by both sides against the outsider? Do the terms of the bargain give either side power to stop production suddenly and to an extent capable of collapsing our entire integrated system?

Is it necessary to accord delegates of unions power to call strikes and establish menacing picketing lines to further some purpose unrelated to the real issue? Is it necessary for strikes to ruin a business before the inevitable agreement is arrived at, usually by arbitration, which could as easily take place before the strike?

Therein lies the field for Wagner law amendments and the sooner the employers stop barking up the "collective" tree and turn on the evils inherent in "bargaining" the sooner will the whole people benefit from a better functioning industrial system.

The Post Impressionist

Story Behind Story

A frown wrinkled the classic brow of The Post's business manager. Six telephone calls in one day to Roanoke and Lynchburg! Viciously his blue pencil circled the offending items on the monthly statement of toll calls.

"Miss ——, take a memo to the State editor. Ask him what in blue blazes happened down there during March to warrant running up a bill like that."

It was merely a four-paragraph story buried on an inside page. But it had four news executives, two correspondents and a cameraman in something more than a dither for a good part of a day. The St. Peter's Church fire, big as it was, didn't even ripple the placid routine of the city news room. The "scoop" scored by The Post in revealing the slaying of a Washington woman and a confession by her son was melodramatic newspapering, but the tension in the city room wasn't half as much as when——

The phone buzzes on the day city editor's desk. An excited female voice pours a stream of words into the day city editor's ear. His bored look vanishes. His pencil races over a sheet of paper, taking copious notes. Hanging up the receiver, he scrambles to the executive city editor.

The executive city editor, who wouldn't believe George Washington is dead unless a staff reporter made a thorough check, immediately phones The Post's bureau manager in Prince Georges County. That worthy drops all work and makes a bee-line to a matron's home in College Park. Carefully he reads through a letter and then grabs a phone.

"Yep," he excitedly assures the executive city editor, "it's in black and white. The lady's brother says he saw 'em."

His news-nose twitching in eagerness, the executive city editor fights hard to overcome his inbred skeptical nature. Years of cynicism, however, prevail.

"Let's make one more check before we charter a plane and send a staff reporter and cameraman," he tells the day city editor. The latter loses a fraction of his dignified bearing and half runs to the State editor's desk.

"Have we a dependable correspondent at Roanoke?" Without waiting for an answer, the day city editor lets loose a verbal torrent of explanation.

The phone trembles in the impatient hands of the State editor, "Our correspondent at Roanoke," he stutters to the indifferent operator. "In a hurry."

Atmosphere in the city room is electrified by now. The two city editors are in a huddle. A cameraman is warned to have his equipment ready.

Mumbling under his breath about the urgency of getting a plane chartered, the day city editor, blares at the State Editor: "Got that Roanoke man yet?"

The Roanoke correspondent, reports back the State editor, isn't in his office and a colleague doesn't know when he'll be back. Stymied! No! A correspondent should be available in Lynchburg, only 55 miles away.

The Lynchburg correspondent is contacted, sworn to secrecy, warned to keep all information confidential for The Post's exclusive use, then told to stand by for further orders.

One more effort to obtain the Roanoke correspondent. Success! He's also sworn and warned. Then the waiting period as the Roanoke reporter drives his car through dirt roads in the Blue Ridge Mountains to an almost inaccessible shack. Four news executives in The Post's city room helplessly wait, knowing they're "sitting" on a story that'll be Page One in every newspaper in the United States, Canada and foreign nations.

Minutes drag. One hour. Two hours. Finally, the Roanoke correspondent phones in. Magically, the tension relaxes. A rewrite man, just arrived, clamps the earphones over his head, stifles a yawn and pounds out the story in four and a half minutes flat.

As the story (condensed) appeared in the paper:

Rumor of Quints
In the Blue Ridge
Dies A-Borning

A report ran up and down the Blue Ridge Mountains last week that quintuplet girls were born to Mr. and Mrs. John Waddell.

The rumor spread to College Park, Md., and from there to Washington yesterday. Investigation proved that five baby girls were born on leap-year day . . . in Roanoke Hospital . . . The Waddells were parents of only one . . .

Publicity The Cure

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The man in the street in England, France, Germany, Russia, etc., has no desire to kill the man in the street in other countries; still less has he that desire when he endangers his own life in doing so. That seems only logical, yet he finds himself in front-line trenches hurling death and destruction at fellow human beings.

It behooves America to put an end to all this secret diplomacy that bathes the world in blood so often. America must expose the forces of persons behind the politicians said to precipitate these so-called righteous wars that should be settled around the conference table by intelligent men, women and statesmen.

The common sense and justice of the American people is far superior to stupid, selfish behind-closed-door diplomacy. Let our statesmen lay all the facts, pro and con, before our people. Publicity is the healthy cure.

Call a convention and invite all the nations of the world to assemble here. Let each nation have representatives from every creed within its borders. Let every trade and profession have representatives within the nation. Let the voices in this convention be broadcast to the world. Suppress nothing. Then we can draw on our own conclusions. Books And Things

Circus Stuff

AS THE CANAL itself was the true hero of "Erie Water" and the Mohawk Valley settlements of "Drums Along the Mohawk," so Huguenine's Great and Only International Circus is the hero of Walter Edmond's new novel, "Chad Hanna" (Little, Brown, $2.75). And if the new book lacks something of the force and dignity of its predecessors, it has even more romantic charm. And Mr. Edmonds can be counted on to jack into his stories a deep sense of the mid-State country he knows and loves so well, and to paint in his background—the scene is set in 1836—with strong color and conscientious historical accuracy.

Some people said Chad Hanna was sly-looking and some said he was dumb-looking. His trousers had never been pressed since he put them on and they had teacup-shaped bulges over the knees that gave him a sagged, shuffling look when he walked. He was the envy of every other boy in Canastota, and the horrible example of the pious; nobody was quite sure where he came from, but he was boy-of-all-work at the Yellow Bud Tavern on the Erie Canal ($11 a month and keep), the laziest lad inside the hotel Mr. Mott had ever hired, and the most careful at rubbing down a horse. He had a natural understanding of horses, as of fish; he was the intimate friend of every dog in town, and he had an Indian's talent for moving without sound. His best friend in Canastota was one Elias Proops, who spent his days sitting on the porch of the Yellow Bud, demonstrating to admiring canalers and others his amazing ability to spit from the porch clear into the canal; not even Chad had ever matched that feat.

It happened that Bobby Gray, the minister's son, was accepted as a friend by Chad, with some reservations; and Bobby's father was an Abolitionist, interested in the Underground Railway for runaway slaves. The Rev. Mr. Gray didn't approve of Chad, but he had faith in his resourcefulness, which led Chad into a series of complications, some of which might have astonished the parson had he known of them. It also happened that B. D. Bisbee, advance agent for Huguenine's Great and Only, came to Canastota; and that circumstance revolutionized Chad's life, even more than the adventures of Henry Prince, the black man with a $200 reward on his head and a set of fiendish slave-catchers on his trail.

B. D. BISBEE said the Great and Only would be the biggest tent show that ever came to Canastota.

"It's the first," said Elias Proops. "It's a dinger just the same, said B. D. Bisbee.

"Five wagons, a covered tent and seats for 300 people." Lady Lillian's academy act, he added, was by itself worth the whole cost of admission. Chad, to be sure, got a free pass for his care of the horses. And no reader will be surprised to learn that Chad left Canastota as a roustabout in Huguenine's employ; no reader, indeed, would tolerate any other course. Hidden in the back of one of the circus wagons, of course, was Henry Prince. And, under the protection of Lady Lillian was another passenger—Caroline Trid, a scrawny girl whose father, one of the fiendish slave-catchers, had beaten her black and blue because she had let Chad put one over on her. She was to play a big part in Chad's life.

Cutting another course across the State was the bigger Burke & Walsh Combined Equestrian and Acrobatic Circus and Menagerie, with its elephant and its horned rhinoceros, and a tough gang of hands who had no intention of letting a two-by-four outfit like Huguenine's invade its territory and cut its profits. You will find in Mr. Edmond's story some of the most blood-curdling tales of cut-throat competition in the long annals of the circus. Ike Wayfish outwitted Burke & Walsh in Lyons; but in the Battle of Lockville numbers told. Burke bought Lady Lillian away from Huguenine in Auburn, and that gave Caroline her chance. But he mistreated the little lady shamefully, and in Saratoga Springs . . . But I can't be telling Mr. Edmond's story for him.

The Once Over

Entitled "Sun Spots"

I WAS RINGING the front doorbell a half hour!" exclaimed Elmer Twitchell as Mrs. Twitchell finally let him in last evening.

"It doesn't work right," replied Mrs. Twitchell. "You can ring it, but it only works now and then."

"What's the matter?" demanded Elmer.

"It's them sun spots, I guess," replied Mrs. Twitchell.

Elmer snorted and tuned in his radio. The sounds, whatever they were, sounded very far away. Elmer fiddled with the dial vainly.

"You can't get much on the radio," said Mrs. Twitchell. "Sun spots."

"I gotta headache," said Mr. Twitchell. "Any aspirin?"

"I told you yesterday, we were all out," said Mrs. Twitchell.

"I'll drive down to the drugstore and get some," snapped Elmer. "You'll never think of it."

He came back presently in high temper. "I can't get the darned car started."

"There's plenty of gas in it," said the wife.

"How long since you put water in the battery?"

"Only a few days ago."

"Have you had any trouble with it?"

"It went dead three times on the way to the grocery store this morning," replied Mrs. Twitchell. "I had to get pushed. The steering wheel is loose, too. I nearly had a bad accident. And there's a funny noise in the engine."

"How come it goes on the bum so suddenly?"

"I dunno," said Mrs. Twitchell, "unless it's those sun spots. The papers say those spots are to blame for everything."

Elmer sighed and sat down to dinner. The steak was terrible.

"Since when do I rate dog meat?" he roared.

"That's no dog meat," snapped Mrs. Twitchell. "It's top round. It's too rare, that's all."

"Why ain't it cooked right?"

"Sun spots," said Mrs. Twitchell. "The gas range don't work right."

Elmer leaped from his chair, threw his steak against the wall, whisked his dishes onto the floor, kicked his chair across the room and went into a tantrum such as Mrs. Twitchell had never seen before. It took hours to bring him back to earth.

"Why, Elmer, you never acted like this before. Your nerves have gone all to pieces. What's happened to you?"

"Sun spots," blurted Elmer, simply, crowning her with a chair.

The Cabinet Shuffle

By Donald C. Bingham

Captain, U. S. N., Retired

The Parellel Of 1916

THE REORGANIZATION of the British war cabinet so as to concentrate responsibility in ministerial committees and to place strategic direction of military and air as well as naval forces in the hands of Winston Churchill, follows a pattern strikingly similar to that of the first World War. The chief difference is that the shakeup of the Chamberlain cabinet has occurred in the seventh month of the war, whereas the reorganization under Premier Lloyd George did not occur until two and a half years after the declaration of war.

Nevertheless, the basic principle reflected in the recent cabinet changes was established as long ago as 1902. In November of that year the first lord of the admiralty and the secretary of war submitted a joint memorandum to the prime minister, Mr. Balfour, urging that the existing defense committee of the cabinet should be abolished. They proposed to replace it by a body which would have authority to consider the "most difficult and important problems of all, namely, those which are neither purely naval, nor purely military, nor purely military and naval combined, but which may be described as naval,

Mr. Balfour pushed this suggestion of his ministers forward with great vigor. However, the new committee of imperial defense was not formally brought into existence until May 4, 1904. The prevailing characteristic of the new organization was elasticity. The prime minister was to be its permanent president, a point on which the utmost stress was laid. Indeed, in theory at least, the prime minister was the only member but he could summon whom he pleased to aid him. He had absolute discretion in the selection and variation of the committee members. To all intents and purposes the prime minister became the commander in chief of the British armed forces, with the secretary of the permanent secretariat as his chief of staff.

The permanent secretariat sprang from a recommendation by a special committee. This body, known as the Esher committee, pointed out that "there have been in the past and there will be in the future prime ministers to whom the great questions of imperial defense do not appeal. . . .

It is not safe to trust matters of national security to the chance of a favorable combination of personal characteristics."

Lloyd George has declared that in the creation of the committee of imperial defense Balfour rendered a service to his country which should have won for him immortality.

Many there are, indeed, who have bitterly criticized the preparations of the British for the first World War and the subsequent conduct of that war. Such criticisms are not wholly justified. The official British naval historian, Julian Corbett, says that whether the scale on which te British prepared was as large as the times required and whether Britain did right to cling to their long-tried system of a small army and a large navy are points that will long remain in dispute. But, given the scale which they deliberately chase to adopt, there is no doubt that the machinery for setting their forces in action had reached an ordered completeness which had no parallel in British history.

Notwithstanding the almost universal commendation of the work of the committee of imperial defense as embodied in the War Book, one must conclude from the records of the World War that there was an apparently inexcusable lack of vision on the part of some statesmen (1) in the conduct of the war, (2) in the organization for the conduct of the war, and (3) concerning the part that the armed forces could and should play in the war.

Probably the greatest shock the British civilian leaders received in their preparations for war came at the time of the Agadir crisis in 1911 which had caused the committee of imperial defense to inquire into the joint war plans. At one of the meetings, the first sea lord stated, rather unexpectedly, that the plan of the admiralty for war with Germany was quite different from that of the war office.

On the outbreak of war in 1914 there was no unanimity of opinion among the prime minister, the war office and the admiralty, as to the best way to utilize the forces which were to be mobilized in accordance with the provisions of the War Book.

At the very last minute doubt was raised not only as to the number of divisions to be sent to France but also as to whether or not any divisions were to be sent immediately. This doubt was due to the fact that many British army and naval officers held to the British tradition that British forces should not be used on the continent in making frontal attacks but on the flanks of their weakest enemies, regardless of the ocean distances involved.

The failure of the war office, and the admiralty to agree caused Britain's statesmen much concern but they never lost faith in the committee of imperial defense. Haldane, for instance, states that he always had hoped that in war time the committee would become the great general staff of the empire. This hope was partially, if not fully, realized when Lloyd George created a war cabinet consisting of four ministers without portfolio, the Lord President and himself. Its staff was the permanent secretariat of the committee of the imperial defense.

On February 10, 1917, the secretary, Maurice Hankey, submitted an "agenda for the forthcoming special war cabinet meetings with representatives of the dominions and India." These agenda are interesting not only because of the vision indicated in their preparation and execution, but also because they anticipated the entrance of the United States in the World War by two months.

MR. GARNER

A vote for him in the primaries is, of course, a vote against Mr. Roosevelt. But if the President should decide upon a third term, how many Garner Democrats would express their disapproval by voting Republican next fall? See Mark Sullivan's observations today

Virtue In An 'If'

By Mark Sullivan

The Third-Term Enigma

IN THE DEDUCTIONS to be drawn from the Illinois and Nebraska primaries next Tuesday, there is a condition which will not appear in the figures, but to which weight must be given. The same was true of the Wisconsin primary last Tuesday. The condition can be illustrated by considering the Wisconsin returns.

In Wisconsin the total who voted in the Democratic primary was greater than the total in the Republican primary. While the Wisconsin balloting was extremely complex, and will take days to tabulate exactly, it may be said that the total in the Democratic primary was about 400,000, and in the Republican primary about 350,000. From this the deduction is made that there are more Democrats in the State than Republicans, that the Democrats will carry Wisconsin in November.

But there was a reason for a greater turnout of Democrats. In the Democratic primary was a real controversy, as deep a one as ever occurs. It was between those who wish a third term, and voted for Mr. Roosevelt; and those who oppose a third term, and voted for Mr. Garner. On this question practically everybody in the Democratic Party, in Wisconsin and elsewhere, has a strong position. This condition was certain to bring out a maximum Democratic vote in Wisconsin, and in Illinois and Nebraska next Tuesday.

In the Republican Party, on the other hand, there is no such controversy. In Wisconsin, the race between Mr. Dewey and Mr. Vandenberg, the only entrants, engendered no especial feeling. Probably most of those who voted for one of the two would have been almost as willing to vote for the other. What one stands for does not differ materially from what the other stands for. Certainly no person who voted for Mr. Vandenberg in the primary is so disappointed with the victory of Mr. Dewey as not to vote for the latter next November. There was in the Republican contest no such intensity of feeling as in the Democratic one.

IN WISCONSIN something like 200,000 voters stayed at home. It is tenable to suppose that most of these were Republican voters rather than Democratic. In the Democratic primary was a struggle of a sort to bring everyone to the polls; in the Republican primary there was not. If we are dealing with potentialities, it would not be far-fetched to estimate that the bulk of those 200,000 stay-at homes last Tuesday will be more likely to vote Republican than Democratic next November. What was true in Wisconsin is likely to be true in all the States in which primaries will be held. In all, a maximum proportion of the Democrats are likely to go to the polls, to register their convictions on the deeply engrossing third term issue.

Another condition about which there is speculation is: of the one out of every three Democrats who voted for Mr. Garner in Wisconsin last Tuesday — that is, voted against Mr. Roosevelt—how many would again vote against Mr. Roosevelt in November? How many, unwilling to go the length of voting Republican, would stay at home? To attempt to answer these questions in terms of numbers or percentages would be futile.

The Democrats are fortunate in the fact that the outstanding symbol of the anti-Roosevelt, anti-third-term movement is Mr. Garner. Of all the leaders in the Democratic Party, Mr. Garner is probably the least likely to lead an organized bolt, to set up a third party of dissenters. Upon Mr. Garner the tie of party is very strong. If Mr. Roosevelt is nominated by the Democrats in July, Mr. Garner is likely to announce that he is for the ticket. The largest dissent that could be expected from him would be silence.

And if Mr. Garner does not lead an organized bolt, it will be difficult for any one else to do it. If the outstanding leader and symbol of the anti-Roosevelt and anti-third-term movement abides by the result, it will be difficult for any minor leader to organize a bolt. To say this is by no means to cast doubt on the strong probability that hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, of Democratic voters, would express their distaste for a third term by voting for the Republican candidate.

All that can be said about this is speculation. Every aspect of the Presidential year so far hangs upon an "if," a question—will Mr. Roosevelt run again?

ABOUT THAT THERE was one small glimmer of so-to-speak negative light at the President's first press conference following the Wisconsin primary. In the conference not one word was said about the Wisconsin outcome, or anything related to the third term, or to the Presidential campaign. Mr. Roosevelt volunteered nothing, no newspaper man asked a question about it. The Wisconsin primary and the third term were as absent from every mind as if they were in the distant past. Perhaps the only real inference that can be made from this is that the excitement and fun and suspense have gone out of the third term question.

A frequent surmise is that Mr. Roosevelt will make no declaration, until the Democratic National Convention. All the dates at which he might appropriately have spoken have now passed. To speak now, with two primaries already held and the others coming along, would be awkward, and inscrutable—with an inscrutableness that could have no purpose. By the Democratic convention, Mr. Roosevelt will know whom the Republicans have nominated. He will have the measure of his own strength in the Democratic primaries. So far as and if he awaits some kind of emergency, in our foreign relations or otherwise, that might seem to justify his running, everything will have happened. A frequent belief is that, after surveying the situation as it finally lies, he will decide whether the running is good; and that if good, but only if good, he will run.

Small Nations And The Future

Must They Federate, If They Are To Survive ?

By Count H. C. de Wiart

Belgian Minister of State

"GOD DID NOT make people with a compass," Lamartine once wrote to a friend across the Alps, to console him for belonging to a small nation. The disproportion which exists between states, like that between individuals, seems to have its source in some mysterious physiological law. Along with great powers extending over thousands of square miles and including the whole gamut of different climates and vegetations, along with those bounded by different seas, and even different oceans—there are others with modest boundaries established by nature or political expediency.

Nevertheless, from the historical viewpoint, they all represent the same evolution by which provinces—themselves developed out of the grouping of communes or fiefs—have been assembled by either spontaneous action or by force into national unities, endowed with sovereignty and independence, and determined not to be absorbed by their neighbors.

All of them, large or small, rich or poor, can lay claim to the same right, to live and govern themseleves with a freedom only restricted by the similar right accorded to other nations. The Christmas message of Pope Pius XII was an excellent statement of this principle: "The will to life of one nation must never involve the death sentence of another."

THE SMALL NATIONS—named in the Treaty of Versailles as "powers of limited interests," more politely and more precisely termed by Max Ruber "states that are not large"—can lay claim to an equality with the great powers, on a moral as well as a legal basis. In international life, the small nations stand as defenders of the right, since they are always conscious of the weaker part.

Both unwilling and unable to rely solely on material strength, inclined toward a certain distrust of the great powers—they have a common interest in a loyal cooperation to impose order and peace at the expense of national greed. Their role in universal civilization has always been to encourage moderation, to promote quality rather than quantity, to support the reactions of justice against the brutal force of numbers. Wedged in between larger states, whose friction they lessen and whose equilibrium they serve to maintain, they offer to the independence of peoples, and to the liberty of mankind, a guarantee against both mass domination and imperialism with its attendant servitudes.

Unfortunately all these claims and all these acknowledged virtues do not prevent states of the second rank from leading today a more dangerous existence than ever. All of them had fixed their highest hopes in the League of Nations. Their enthusiasm was chilled at seeing the failure of its plan for disarmament, and of its promises of collective security. Not only were they disillusioned, but in the confusion attendant upon the execution of the pact, they feared being dragged into complications which, though not touching upon their individual interests, would none the less plunge them into the horrors of conflict. Thus they logically fell back on a stricter conception of neutrality, most of them moreover providing for an efficacious defense of that neutrality by the solid force of arms.

At this moment, they are watching with anxiety the ins and outs of the great conflict let loose on their frontiers or their shores. At the end of that conflict, the great powers will doubtless continue to exist, reduced or reinforced in territory and prestige. But what will be the influence of the war's outcome on the small nations? They realize that they have everything to fear from a conception of international relations ruled by force, dominated by the law of the jungle. They have heard and meditated upon those brazen doctrines of a blind and heavy pedantry, which relegate small states to the category of wretched and valueless institutions destined to be absorbed sooner or later by the great powers.

Even should the peace to come recognize the right of each nationality worthy of the name to live its own life, the small nations will have to face, after the war, a new phenomenon which seems now in the process of development: the construction of two or three economic blocs, corresponding approximately to the situation in the present war, with a tendency to divide Europe among them. It looks as if the small nations would be condemned to make a difficult choice of alternatives. Either they must accept membership in one of the blocs, at the risk of losing a certain amount of sovereignty and independence, or they must resign themselves to a precarious existence, crushed between two of the powerful blocs, without recourse to an autarchy reserved as a special luxury for the great powers.

HOWEVER OBSCURE and critical the future to be faced by the small nations, it is certain that their best means of meeting these problems is to consolidate among their citizens, in their interior constitutions, the will to live together and to make the necessary sacrifices for the national defense. Recent history seems to me to contain another lesson: the usefulness—for small even more than for large nations—of a hereditary monarchy. Is it not striking to observe that the medium-sized states which have been the victims of recent events, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, the Baltic states—were all republics? Of course, it cannot be definitely affirmed that in any of their cases a monarchy would have been able to save them from aggression and ruin.

It is certain, however, that such a government would have constituted for each of them a chance of continuity, by assuring means of information, of contact, and support, in relation to other states. For questions of internal politics as well, a monarchy constitutes an unparalleled element of concentration, and of arbitration between the parties and races making up a single state.

This truth has been brought home even to the Socialists, who formerly placed the establishment of a republic at the head of their program, and since then, gradually enlightened by reality, have become strong defenders of the throne—if not of the altar. This is notably the case in the Scandinavian countries as well as in Holland and Belgium.

What a surprise it would be for the philosophers who prepared the revolution in 1789, or that of 1848, if they came back to earth to find a revival of the institutions of monarchy which they thought completely outdated—and to find it the most likely agent for the future conciliation of the rights of authority and those of democracy.

EDUARD BENES

"The fate of his country holds a lesson for all small nations."

Hopes Vainly Placed In The League Of Nations

IT SEEMS within the realm of probability that the identity of interests among the small nations, now manifested in a common safeguard of their rights of neutrality, may lead after the war to the establishment of an alliance or even a sort of federation. "In the Europe to come," said Mons. Daladier in a recent address to the French Senate, "we must perhaps look forward to certain federal bonds between the states."

The idea is not a new one. No one has forgotten surely the "Pan Europe" advocated by Comte Coudenhove-Kalergi, or the plan of "European Union" submitted by Aristide Briand to the League of Nations. The "Oslo Group" are manifestations of the same trend. In America, Clarence Streit launched the formula "Union Now," for uniting the democracies. In England, the "New Commonwealth" movement, and the "Federal Union" movement of which Lord Lothian is a prominent advocate, both have numerous followers.

All those methods are born of a desire to assure the territorial security and economic prosperity of the peoples thus moved to unite. What is most likely to be the manifestation of this tendency among the small nations? Without risking the role of prophet, it seems logical to suppose that the League of Nations will serve as a rallying center in this case—especially since by its reception of the Finnish appeal it has regained much of the popularity formerly lost.

It is possible to say of the League—if it did not exist, it would have to be invented. Its organization and operation are bound to be improved by 20 years of experience. No future international effort for the establishment of peace can afford to overlook a meeting place which offers the best installation, documentation, and working facilities for loyal discussion and practical cooperation between civilized nations, anywhere to be found.

Va. Butterflies 'Come With Wind,' Smithsonian Says

Some of Virginia's most interesting butterflies have "come with the wind," according to the Smithsonian Institution's report of its explorations and field work, just made public.

They have been blown over into the Old Dominion from West Virginia, reports Austin H. Clark, curator of the division of echinoderms, U. S. National Museum.

Suspecting this was the case with individuals of the "silky blue," the "Virginia white" and the "Olympian marble," types of butterfly that he found in Virginia, Curator Clark went into West Virginia, where he found them in such large numbers in Hampshire County, that he decided that was their natural home.

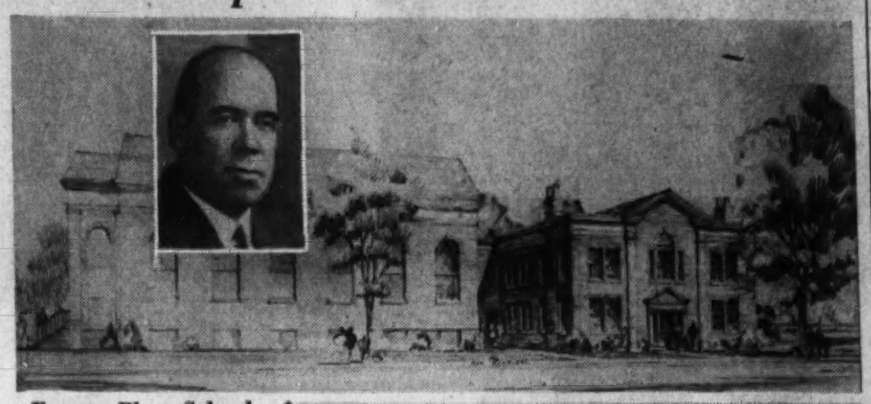
Going Forward

Arlington Calvary Methodist and Fountain Memorial Baptist to Break Ground Tomorrow



Former Plans School Building, Latter New Church Edifice

Two congregations in and near the Nation's Capital tomorrow afternoon will mark milestones in their careers by breaking ground for new buildings.

REV. MR KING

They will be the Fountain Memorial Baptist Church, Naylor road and Q street southeast, led by the Rev. W. Bertram King, and the Calvary Methodist Church, Thirty-second and South Grant street, Arlington, Va., of which the Rev. Thomas G. Betschler is pastor.

Several prominent religious leaders will participate in the services of the southeast church, set to begin at 3 p. m. with a program in the auditorium, to be followed by the groundbreaking.

Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention; the Rev. Charles B. Austin, pastor of West Washington Baptist Church, and moderator of the convention; Dr. John E. Briggs, Fifth Baptist pastor; Dr. F. W. Johnson, pastor of Grace Baptist Church, and others will take part. Dr. Weaver also will address the Fountain Memorial Church services at 11 a. m.

Will Cost $45,000

Two former pastors—Dr. Hubert Bunyea and the Rev. W. J. Hubbard—also will have a part in the ground-breaking, at which Mrs. Grace Blakeslee, sole charter member, will turn the first spade of earth. Special music also has been arranged.

Its cost estimated at $45,000, the Fountain Memorial project will include a church unit of stone and an educational structure of brick.

The first floor will contain a church auditorium with a seating capacity of 300, baptismal and organ; pastor's study, offices and accommodations for beginners', adult and cradle roll divisions. The educational unit will have eight classrooms on the second floor. The basement will contain a fellowship hall, kitchen and other features.

The ground-breaking rites of the Calvary Church Educational Building, also set for 3 p. m., will have as speakers Dr. A. P. Williams, superintendent of the Alexandria district of the Methodist Church, Virginia Conference; Dr. E. A. Sexsmith, pastor of Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church here, and others. The Rev. G. W. Haddaway, executive secretary of the board of missions of the former Methodist Protestant denomination, will preach at 11 a. m.

Former Pastor to Speak

Taking turns at breaking ground will be E. J. Skidmore, Sunday school superintendent; H. I. Harris, president of the board of trustees; Mrs. Jeannette Allwine and Mrs. Esther Blankenhorn, charter members of congregation, and representatives of other church and Sunday school groups.

The Rev. John W. Townsend, former pastor and now leader of the Peninsula Methodist Church, Wilmington, Del., will speak at 7:45 p. m.

The new building, to cost about $35,000, will be of brick construction, with accommodations for 600 Sunday school scholars.

Ample room will be provided for dinners, movies, plays and social activities, with a separate kitchenette adjoining the intermediate department for young people's socials. The former chapel building has been relocated and will be used by Boy Scouts and kindred groups. The new quarters also will have meeting rooms for the Ladies' Aid Society, official board, Sunday School Association and special committees.

Dr. Malone to Preach

Dr. Emerson H. Malone, manager of the Universalist Publishing House, Boston, former minister in Brooklyn and other places and author of the recent book, "And Thy Neighbor as Thyself," will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Universalist National Memorial Church. Dr. Seth R. Brooks, pastor, will preside.

Church of the Week

Centenary Methodist in Laurel Studies Merger With Trinity

Special Committees Meet to Discuss Union Tomorrow

REV. A. T. PERKINS

Merger of two Methodist churches in Laurel, Md.—Centenary and Trinity—is now being considered, the Rev. Alvin T. Perkins, pastor of the former, disclosed to The Post yesterday.

The proposed union, discussion of which began about a year ago, resulted last week in a joint meeting of special committees of churches. Another meeting will be held tomorrow after evening services at Centenary Church.

The Rev. Mr. Perkins is chairman of the Centenary special committee of E. A. Vogts, S. Clayton Keys, Charles Haslup and Mrs. W. E. Beall.

Methodism in Laurel began in 1840 with services in the "upper room" of the corner brick dwelling of "Yellow Row." In 1842 Henry Snowden secured a grant of land, a gift of stone and $300 from the Patuxent Manufacturing Co. for the Methodist meeting house—the Stone Church—forerunner of Centenary. The old church is still standing in west Laurel.

One of Maryland's most rapidly growing congregations, Centenary has for some time hoped to erect a religious educational building. The quarterly conference has authorized a committee to study the situation. With union of the two churches construction of an educational unit would be a necessity.

Energetic and resourceful spiritual leader and former classmate of Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, at the Friends School in Baltimore, the Rev. Mr Perkins is now conducting a loyalty campaign that is drawing capacity congregations to the brick church on Main street.

A series of timely sermons has been one of the features of the special services held on Sunday nights, with "The Secret of Happiness in Married Life" as tomorrow's theme. The series, which began on March 17, will end on May 19.

His other topics will be "Divine Healing: Is It of God or Satan?" April 14; "The Living Dead," April 21; "Precious Promises of Jesus," April 28; "Can the Living Communicate With the Dead?" May 5; "Is America Headed Toward Communism?" May 12, and "A Sermon on a Raised Window Shade," May 19.

Officials of Centenary Church include many prominent civic leaders of Prince Georges County.

Among them are J. H. Fetty, former Mayor of Laurel and well-known real estate man; Edward F. Millard, former councilman; Walter Tolson, councilman; Herman P. Cole, cashier of the Citizens National Bank; Calvin Donaldson, worthy patron of the Eastern Star and past master of the Masonic lodge; E. A. Vogts, DeWitt Donaldson, S. Clayton Keys, E. C. Parks, Mrs. Bessie Beaver, Mrs. Bernice Fisher, Miss Helen Hill and Mrs. Owen Disney.

Organization leaders include Mrs. Fisher, president of the Ladies Aid Society; Mrs. Beall, Woman's Foreign Missionary Society; Edgar Watts, Epworth League; S. Clayton Keys, Sunday school; Mrs. Elsie Geiss Linkons, beginners' and primary department; Mrs. E. C. Vogts, choir director, and Miss Alice Frothingham, organist.

Pastor of Centenary since 1937, the Rev. Mr. Perkins has served other pulpits at Washington Grove, Md.; Rosedale, in Washington; Congress Heights and other churches. He was graduated from Johns Hopkins University with a B. A. degree in 1915.

The Rev. E. A. Wilcher is pastor of Trinity Church, which is located on Montgomery avenue. He is chairman of the special committee, which includes the Rev. G. R. May, retired former pastor of Trinity; C. C. Whitmore, Calvin Fairall, Mrs. Annie Harrison, Charles Reely and E. C. Windel.

Mr. Whitmore heads the board of stewards, which also includes Mr. Reely, Mr. Fairall, Lee Harrison, Mr. Windel and Mrs. Harrison. Mr. Whitmore also is Sunday school superintendent.

Missionary To Be Columbia Heights Guest

Dr. J. D. Montgomery, disciples of Christ missionary from Colegio Ward, Buenos Aires, Argentina, will occupy the pulpit tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Columbia Heights Christian Church, Dr. Arthur P. Wilson, pastor, will preach at 8 p. m.

Dr. Montgomery, now on furlough, will be tendered a reception by the congregation on Monday at 8 p. m., and will address the Woman's council on Tuesday at 10:45 a. m.

National City. "Union of Church and State, or a United Church in the United States" will be Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller's sermon theme for tomorrow at 11 a. m. at National City Christian Church. The ladies' quartet will sing "The Lord's Prayer," by Forsythe-Dews.

Fifteenth Street. In the first of a series of sermons on "Identification Marks of a Christian," the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers will preach tomorrow at 8 p. m. on "A Christian Tongue." His 11 a. m. theme will be "Man's Chief End."

Park View. Lord's Supper will be celebrated tomorrow at 8 p. m., when the Rev. J. Lloyd Black will preach on "Launch Out Into the Deep."

Third. "How is Your Soul?" will be discussed tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the communion service by the Rev. C. N. Williams.

Mrs. Davis Honored For Sunday School Wor

In recognition of 30 years of continuous service as superintendent of the primary department of the Western Presbyterian Sunday school, Mrs. Birdie Davis has been awarded a gold bar. Resident of 4707 Connecticut avenue northwest, she is active in citywide religious educational work and a local school teacher.

Philippine Mission Parley Planned Here

Dr. Poling to Speak At the Conference To Be Held Next Week

The Foreign Missions Conference of North America will conduct a Philippine conference here from Tuesday until Sunday through a special committee, and with Dr. Daniel A. Poling as principal speaker.

President of the World Christian Endeavor Union and pastor of Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, Dr. Poling will address the opening fellowship dinner at 6 p. m. at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H streets northwest.

Dr. John R. Edwards, pastor of Union Methodist Church and chairman of the local committee for the conference, will preside at the dinner, when other speakers will be Dr. Jorge Bocobo, secretary of the Philippine Department of Public Instruction and president of the Philippine Conference of Evangelical Churches, and Dr. A. L. Warnshuis, secretary of the International Missionary Council.

Dr. Edwards explained yesterday that the purpose of the conference is to plan for a united advance in the evangelical church and mission in the Philippines.

A Philippine guest reception luncheon is scheduled for Thursday, and a popular banquet on Friday at 6:30 p. m. Speakers on that occasion will be the Rev. Frank Ross McCoy, of the Foreign Policy Association and former assistant to the Governor General of the Philippines; Bishop Edwin F. Lee, of Singapore and Manila, and Dr. Peter K. Emmons, of Scranton, Pa.

Music for the conclave will be under the direction of Herbert V. Pate, director of music at the host church. The general program for the meetings has been arranged by Dr. Charles T. Leber, of New York, chairman, and the Rev. E. K. Hignon, Indianapolis, secretary. Delegates will speak from local pulpits on Sunday, April 7.

Potomac Heights Church

Job's Daughters, of Bethel No. 6, will be guests at services tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Potomac Heights Community Church. The Rev. Albert E. Gingerich will preach on "The Inheritance of the Sons and Daughters of Job."

Rankin Chapel Service

Dr. Patrick M. Malin, of Swarthmore College, Swarthmore, Pa., will address religious services in the Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel of Howard University tomorrow at 11 a. m.

"There Is a Green Hill Far Away"
- - - MRS. CECIL F. ALEXANDER - - -

There is a green hill far away
Without the city wall,
Where our dear Lord was crucified
Who died to save us all.

We may not know, we cannot tell
What pains He had to bear;
But we believe it was for us
He hung and suffered there.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

There is no statement in the Gospels that our Lord was crucified on a hill. But Mrs. Alexander fancied that a little grassy hill near the road to Derry was like "Calvary"—and used this poetic license in writing this hymn of sweet simplicity

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Hat Shop Doorwoman Sought; Another Has Night Watchwoman

New York, April 5.

ANYONE WHO has visited Russia under the rule of the big boss, Joe, is well aware of the glorious freedom freely poured out to the ladies by the enlightened dictatorship of old Handle-Bars in the Kremlin. When you get off the rattler at the frontier station to be combed by the customs men and stared at sternly by the local detachment of the Y. M. C. A. boys, or secret police, you will find ladies in rags cheerily using crow-bars and pick-axes on the railroad track, though I never heard singing. But the girls are sure free.

ALICE HUGHES

So this piece is a joyous message to old Joe, and to those American red cards who haven't given up their idea of the party in sickened disgust. American ladies are getting free, too. Not just to be store vice presidents, and such serfs of the capitalist system, but to share the modest, menial labors of the other sex. Why, my pals, John and Fred, the great milliners, are hunting about for a fine, strapping, handsome girl to act as doorwoman for their magnificent hat shop at Forty-eighth and Madison. And a right cute, smart hunch it is.

There is a report current here that Betsey Cushing Roosevelt, who recently divorced Jimmy, is going into some executive work in the movies, just like her ex. Whatever happens, I'm sure all of us wish that lovely girl the best.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—This Capt. Philip Astley, of England and way points, must be quite a lad. Divorced not so long ago from Madeleine Carroll, one of the prettiest blondes still extant, he is now reported marrying Lady Furness, one of the famed Morgan sisters whose twin is Gloria Vanderbilt, and who ranks very high indeed among brunettes for beauty. Yes, this Astley has a good eye on him. He likes the nicest things. Thelma has been out of marriage. It was La Furness, you recall, who introduced the then Prince of Wales to one Wally Warfield Simpson—thus being, in a sense, the beauteous bomb which blew a British King right spang off the throne.

Pearls for Beauty and Utility

"Criss Cross" is the name of the turquoise or pearl necklace above which can be worn in devious ways. It is pictured at top as a halter for a strapless evening gown, but can be adapted to a number of uses, and even crossed over on dark town frocks. The longer necklace and bracelet below it is of oval seed pearls combined with clear jewel tone beads. Both of these Charlottee of Paris designs are effective, inexpensive baubles for new spring finery

Miss Sheldon Shows Way to Joyful Broiled Meal

A-GO-TO-BUSINESS cook finds that a broiled meal is one that can be developed into even a company meal. Broiled meals take kindly to change. A broiled meal that I watched emerge from a slice of ham, slices of sweet potatoes, and slices of pineapple that made a joyful looking platter was the one Ruth Sheldon, home service director of the Washington Gas Light Co., demonstrated at the Bethesda Women's Club Diet and Cooking Forum yesterday. This is what she did to make this delicious, easily prepared meal.

Broiled Meal

Cover 1 ham steak, ¾ to 1 inch thick with water and bring to a boil. Drain well. Put 1 can of niblet corn in bottom of broiler pan, seasoning well. Cover with grid and preheat broiler 8-10 minutes. When heated, place meat and 4 thick slices cooked sweet potatoes and 4-6 drained pineapple slices on broiler grid. Brush fruit and sweet potatoes with melted butter or savory fat and dip in brown sugar before placing on grid. Cook until nicely browned; then turn and brown on other side. Serve hot.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Married at 18 to Man She Considered "Fairy Prince," Girl Is Thoroughly Disillusioned and Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Five years ago, my "home town" beau was transferred to this city. I thought I had found my fairy prince when he asked me to marry him a year later. I was 18 at the time, and looking back, I realize now that I knew nothing about the ways of life or love. Reared in a small town by a very strict mother, I had known few men.

At the end of a year's marriage, my husband and I separated. He said he would get a divorce on grounds of incompatability and I was heartbroken. Six months later he came back and said he was all wrong and sorry for everything. I took him back gladly, for I had longed for him ever since he left. For another year, we got along (or at least, I thought we did). I kept house, worked at temporary clerical jobs and was very happy. But just at the year's end, my husband said he wasn't happy and wanted to leave.

I cared enough for him to want his happiness, so I let him go; and the fact that he continued to contribute to my support, even though I had a job, made me think he cared a little. Then I learned I was going to have a baby, and while I didn't want to tell him, all our friends advised me to, so finally I did. He replied, "I'm sure I don't want a child," and proceeded to advise me not to have the baby. When he learned I wanted the baby, he wrote me letter after letter telling me either to go home to my family or to move to some small town where I could live cheaply.

In the meantime, I met a fine young fellow whom I admired instantly. I told him about myself and we became great friends. He was patient and generous and, most of all, kind. I grew to love him and had his love in return. He said as soon as my husband got his divorce, he wanted to marry me, regardless of the baby. I knew he would give my child love and kindness.

Three months before the baby was born, my husband came back again. He said if I refused to go back to him he would no longer help support me. By that time, I had given up my job, so I took him back on his terms, but I told him I no longer cared for him as I once did. It is now 18 months since I went back to him, and my baby is 15 months old. But I am so miserable.

Constantly I think of the other dear boy, who still loves me and wants me to leave my husband, get a job and start divorce proceedings. I love him dearly and the only thing that keeps me here is my son. I have trained him exactly as I want him to be, and if I put him in someone else's hands, would that training be kept up? Would I be doing the right thing in seeking happiness with the other man? Please advise me soon. RUTH.

No Basis for Divorce, As Situation Stands

DEAR RUTH: There is some question, of course, as to whether marriage to "the other dear boy" would turn out any happier than your off-again-on-again partnership with the father of your child. It might prove to be a case of, "Out of the frying pan, into the fire." Unless he has basic nobility of character, there is a possibility that he will always cherish and, at times, express resentment of your expedient conduct in going back to live with your husband for support, when your heart, supposedly, belonged to him.

Even though your husband took despicable advantage of your dependent condition to drive a bully's bargain, there was an element of muddle headed, dishonorable compromise in your surrender to his terms. In view of his earlier attitude toward the child's coming, and his brutish willingness to bludgeon his way back into your life regardless of your feelings, it was not a self respecting step. Nor was it necessary; nor was it fair to the man you had learned to love because of his loyal devotion to you.

A woman of downright spiritual integrity would have scorned his bribe, and defied the threat of nonsupport. As a matter of fact, his obligation to support you would have remained in effect, whether you took him back or not. In deserting you twice over, he gave you grounds for divorce and alimony maintenance, which could have been obtained at his expense. But in taking him back, you condoned the offense (from the legal viewpoint), so that your standing in court is now problematic, supposing you were to leave him and sue for your freedom.

If you were to leave him now, get a job and start divorce proceedings, you might find yourself acutely embarrassed, from a legal standpoint. The only legally defensive basis for "constructive desertion" is physical abuse, and that, apparently, you do not have. To leave him because you want to marry another man is to make it possible for him to sue you for divorce, on grounds of desertion; and, also, to pave the way for a bitter battle over custody of the child.

Your husband—knavish opportunist that he is, capable of underhand tactics in emergency—might spin nasty circumstantial evidence around the other man's position in the picture and convincingly defame you to the extent that the court would give the child to him.

In view of his past performance, there is a possibility that he may walk out on his obligations again, in the not too distant future, in which event the divorce you desire could be easily obtained, as his previous desertions would then greatly strengthen your case against him. However, there is the counter-possibility that the mean dog-in-the-manger strain in his make-up will keep him on the job as no wifely charms of yours could. Now that he knows you no longer love him; and perhaps also knows that you do love another man who would gladly marry you, he may stick like a leech out of sheer perversity.

But supposing divorce were a simple matter, I think you would be justified in going ahead, on the assumption that a personally constructive course of action, courageously pursued, could not result in psychological harm to your son. Children intuitively sense and instinctively react to the mental attitudes of their parents or direct supervisors. And a secretly unhappy mother is not the best of companions for a little child. Thus, if divorce and remarriage would bring you real happiness, your son (if he shared your new home) would be bound to benefit, even though partially deprived of your nursing care in the new arrangement. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

East Influences Furniture

The East has been going West lately—and coming back with invigorating new ideas in home decoration. The result is an important exhibition of Monterey furniture of interesting handcraft quality shown against backgrounds of Mexican origins adapted to present day living in the States. The same exhibition presents modern interiors with a fresh Western flavor that is more livable, morep ractical and pleasant for the American scene than the foreign modern we've been trying to digest.

Knockout Red Lipstick

A bit of patriotism of the red, white and blue motif seen in dresses and accessories this season now encompass the make-up field. Lipsticks are encased in navy blue containers to harmonize with the navy blue pocketbooks and dresses. One of the newer products of this type is "Knockout," a clear medium red lipstick in a navy blue case. This new lip color was designed especially for navy blue costumes for it is clear enough to bring out the face from the dark background of the costume itself.

Golf Cupboard

A man's closet wants a shelf or racks for big shoes, hangers for heavy coats, a really adequate tie rack with hat hangers, trouser hangers and a cupboard made to keep golf bags and clubs, umbrellas and such likes out from under foot. Not to mention a shoeshine box with foot stand if he's fastidious. The wood grain wall papers of either pine, cedar or oak design are grand for a man's closet—with hangers and accessories in bright green perhaps. Or paper the walls in yellow and accent with autumn leaf brown.

New Types of Floor Coverings

Felt base floor coverings, often incorrectly called linoleum, have designs printed on the surface of the waterproofed felt base. They are made into attractive colorful rugs, and can also be bought by the yard. These felt base coverings are low in cost, and while they cannot be expected to serve permanently, they will give good wear if properly cared for. Water-emulsion or non-polishing wax is suitable as a finish on felt base coverings.

Legs Need Beauty for Short Skirts

Exercise Improves Contour; Walking Especially Good

By Ida Jean Kain

LAST year skirts were daringly raised to 14 inches from the floor and this spring, so help us, they're up to 17 inches!

It may be all right for the women who have lovely legs, but what about the other 95 per cent? Well, it looks as if we'll have to wear our skirts unfashionably long—and have people suspect the reason! Or rashly wear them short in the hopes our new spring bonnet will distract the attention! But, as a last resort, there's always exercise!

Walking is fine, particularly in low heel shoes which stretch the legs. But the car is handy and faster so we don't get much walking. Sports are excellent but most women would rather play bridge.

Skipping Good for Ankles

You might suppose that standing on your two legs a good share of the time ought to be exercise enough. But while the standing and walking we do develop enough strength for all practical purposes, it is far too mild to make for beautiful legs. That's the reason lovely legs are news!

If you are among the majority, you need specific exercise. Turn on the radio, kick off your pumps and get on your toes. Rise on the toes of one foot as the heel of the other foot is pressed down on the floor. Now, reverse it, up and down in time to the music. Skipping about the room on the toes is good exercise, too. Both these measures strengthen wobbly ankles and slim off the lumps of fat which make the ankles appear bulky. They also beautify the calf contour.

Skipping rope should be done on the toes. Or you might suspend an old pillow in a doorway, about hip-height, and kick away at it! It's all fun and good exercise.

Bicycle Riding Helpful

In going up and down stairs, make a habit of walking on the toes rather than coming down with the entire foot.

If you have a tendency to knock-knees, you can do no better than to ride a bicycle, for the pedaling forces you to hold the legs correctly and counteracts the inclination to rotate the thighs inward.

But for real exercise, do the old, reliable deep-knee bend. Go up on the toes, then, very slowly, go into a deep-knee bend without letting the heels lower to the floor.

With skirts getting shorter, leg exercises become more important. One guaranteed to give results is bicycling. The pretty demonstrator above is Eleanor Powell

Wearable Chintz

The manufacturers who've been snubbing chintz these past few seasons will rue the day. For the stanch twills and crashes and sateens they're giving us instead have practically no wear-out to them. And that's just swell for those of us who use them. But what about those who make and sell all the yards of material we don't buy for replenishment because the new fabrics have lasted so much longer than chintz would have.

Debut Party for Ann Brown Provides Gay Preview of Season

Stag Line at Sulgrave Club Dance Belies Capital's Reputation as Man Shy; Flowers in Hats and Bouquets Deck Rooms

By Carolyn Bell

THIS MAY BE a man-shy town, the unofficial ratio being 3 to 1, but the cavaliers were certainly on hand yesterday at the debut of Miss Ann Brown given by her cousin, Miss Eleanor Mary Connolly, at the Sulgrave Club. The first bud to blossom from the spring bouquet, the party was a gay example of "things to come."

With William at the door signifying the party was on, traffic milled about Massachusetts avenue between the hours of 4:30 and 7 o'clock. Inside flower-decked hats vied with the host of fresh spring flowers used throughout the spacious rooms of the club.

With the hostess, Miss Brown received at the head of the stairway. Pretty and blond, she wore a turquoise net frock with a fly-away skirt and a fitted jacket of matching bengaline. She carried a large bouquet of pink sweetpeas, while not far away were several tables laden with the bouquets, of every conceivable shape and size, sent her. Miss Connolly wore a deep blue lace gown with a cluster of white orchids perched on her shoulder.

Although the degutante remained dutifully in the receiving line for quite some time she did manage to slip away now and agani for a twirl about the floor to Sydney's music.

Mrs. Tydings In Blue Bonnet

Two of the merriest hats of the aftrenoon were worn by Mrs. Millard Tydings and Mrs. Robert Grosjean, who were accompanied by their mother, Mrs. Emlen Davies. A brief-brimmed sailor, of robin's-egg blue straw, Mrs. Tydyings' hat was decked with matching flowers and held together with a wisp of veil. Mrs. Grosjean, who wore a sable cape over her ensemble, had a smart pink feature bonnet atop her blonde hair.

An early arrival was Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, who reported that her Daughter Jean was no end annoyed at having to return to school before the party. Mrs. Wallace was assisting as were Mrs. Cordell Hull, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, Mrs. Guy Gillette, Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling, Lady Broderick, Mrs. Charles Warren, Mrs. Charles Beatty Moore, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Edgar Murdock, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Miss Borredell Gower and Miss Margaret Shea.

The debutante, who is the daughter of Mrs. Maurice Brown, of Dubuque, Iowa, will be graduated from Georgetown Visitation Convent Junior College in June. Miss Brown will have been the last of four sisters who have attended the historic convent.

This has been a tradition for several generations back. Yesterday she had invited a host of her classmates—23 in all—to assist. And augmenting the unusually large stag line was virtually half of Georgetown Uhiversity.

Just to mention a few of the young folk, there were Miss Mary Jane Hyland, sporting a chapeau completely of buttercups; Miss Helen Casey, her white straw hat being spiked with bright feathers; Miss Agnes Ryan, Miss Ann Gloninger and Miss Mary Corbin. Guiding the girls about in a neat Conga or waltz, depending on the music, were Rolf Williams, Jim Brady, Bill Burke, Vincent Dwyer, Bill O'Neil, Basil Harris and a host of others.

Diplomats Seen In the Throng

The long tea table, where coffee also was served, was decked with white sweetpeas and yellow candles in tall silver candelabras. Tall turquoise urns, filled with peach gladioli and branches of forsythia, stood in either corner of the room. Noted here and there were the Misses Patten, the Commercial Counselor of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, Miss Sheila Broderick, wearing a smart print frock, Miss Stellita Stapleton, Senora Ricardo Alfaro and her daughter, Yolande, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin in a smart cinnamon ensemble with her son, Norton; Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis and Mrs. Frank Allen, who wore a smart blue bonnet.

Still others glimpsed were Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Miss Eleanor Meem, in a cunning polka dot frock and matching hat; Representative Caroline O'Day, Miss Mary Washington, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, accompanied by her daughter, Elaine, who was gowned in a splashy blue and purple print; Mrs. Daniel Roper and her daughter, Mrs. Frank Bohn, and Mrs. Henry Grant Meem.

Procopes Return To Capital Today

The Minister of Finland and his bride of a week will return today from a brief honeymoon. They were married last Saturday at the Fairfax, Va., homeof R. Walton Moore, counselor of the State Department. The bride is the former Miss Margaret Shaw, of England.

The couple spent several days at the Farmington Club in Charlottesville, Va., following their marriage, and then toured Williamsburg and other points of interest in Virginia.

Luncheon Honors Mrs. Edward Pou

Mrs. John H. Overton, wife of Senator Overton, of Louisiana, was a guest at a luncheon given Thursday by Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby, in honor of Mrs. Edward Pou.

Mrs. Pou, who is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden, is being widely entertained during her stay. Yesterday's party for her took place at the Army-Navy Country Club. Covers were laid for 22.

Mother to Give Party Tomorrow For Izetta Jewel

Mrs. Izetta Jewel Miller will entertain at a party tomorrow from 5 until 6 o'clock at 1526 New Hampshire avenue in honor of her daughter, Miss Izetta Jewel, who will come down from New York for the occasion. Miss Jewel's visit here will be a fleeting one for she will return to New York in time for the opening on Monday of "Richard II," with Maurice Evans, in which she has a part.

Many of Miss Jewel's fellow-players from the Cross Roads summer theater, will attend the party tomorrow. Guests will include Representative and Mrs. Jennings Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. George Ross, Miss Maxine Davis, Alexander Clark, one of the cast of "Margin for Error" who will stay over for the party; ;M;iss ;;Meredith Howard, Day Tuttle, William Girvan, Reginald Allan, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Dennis and many others.

Evelyn Arnold's Troth Announced

Of interest here is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Evelyn Arnold, daughte rof Mr. and Mrs. G. Stanleigh Arnold, of Kentfield, Marin County, Calif., to Edouard R. Bossange, jr., son of E. Raymond Bossange, dean of the school of architecture of New York University and Mrs. Bossange, of Riverdale-on-Hudson.

Miss Arnold is a granddaughter of Mrs. William Kent and the late Mr. Kent, one-time United States Representative from California, who deeded the area in California known as Muir Woods to the Government.

Mr. Bossange, who is a member of the St. Anthony Club, was graduated from Deerfield Academy and, in 1938, from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Pierre Bossange, of Paris, France, and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Percival Lowell Everett, of Boston.

The wedding will take place late in August in Kentfield.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

THE MISSES ISABELLE and Marjorie Meuser and cousin, Arthur Bradley Campbell, stepped off the new Pan-American supreclipper yesterday afternoon just in time to rush to dress for Clarence Hewes' cocktail party in their honor. Marjorie holds pilot's licenses in England, France and the United States.

The two girls, who are currently refugees from England, will make their Washington debut at a tea to be given April 16, at the 1925 F street club by their cousin. They lived in Londno for many years with his mother, the late Marchioness of Huntly. Both are pretty and friendly. Yesterday Marjorie wore pale gray trimmed with a little whit elace collar and her sistre was in deep blue with gold embroidery on the jacket. The trio will summer in Newport and spend next wintre here.

ELLEN HEWES FLOWERREE, in a long, spring-like dress of pale blue chiffon and two gardenias at the waist, helped her uncle yesterday. Mrs. Wallach Merriam, who will chaperone the Meusers, also assisted. Pouring tea were Mrs. McCord Boyle, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. McCeney Werlich and Miss Caroline Nash. Mrs. Kenna Elkins, in black with white at the neck, and short sleeves, presided over a silver bowl filled with a rum and champagne concoction.

The guests were mostly debutantes and post-debs. An exception was Evalyn McLean, who caused something of a sensation by requesting not to have a debut. She wore a sumptuous sable stole with her black dress. Eleanor Flood, arriving with Charlie Gaines, topped off her outfit with a silver fox cape. Merilynn Himes was envied her Florida sunburn. Cecilai vom Rath's tiny hat was made almost entirely of white petals, and Eleanor Meem's just matched her navy blue and white polka dot dress.

Sherlock Davis, Pendleton Hogan, who says he will shortly begin another nvoel, Robert Coe, Jack Segar, Dorsey Fisher, John Hammond and Jimmy Mitchell were some of the extra men mustered to meet the debutantes.

Kitty Hill, who spent all yesterday unwrapping wedding presents for sister Elise Hill, rarived looking none the worse in a spring print. She will make her debut next Thanksgiving.

IT WOULD BE VERY NICE to know what's being discussed every day at a certain table for two just at the left of the entrance to the Mayflower dining room. The headwaiter always saves this particular spot either for Sumner Welles or A. A. Berle, or both, if they are lunching together. Yesterday Mr. Berle and a friend got there first so Mr. Welles had to choose another place.

Edward R. Stettinius, youthful chairman of United States Steel, was another luncher yesterday. Mrs. Joseph Davies, just back from Florida, sat with Mrs. Millard Tydings, while Mr. Welles and Mr. Davies ate together.

TELEPHONIC TACT is one reason why the Australian legation is rapidly gaining the reputation of being one of the friendliest in Washington. "Australian legatoin, good morning" is what you get when you call there . . . Mrs. Seton Explores Feminine Writings

Investigator of Tigers and Jungles Is in Town Just After Becoming Honorary Member of Journalism Sorority

When Grace Thompson Seton comes to town, the first question naturally is, "What have you been doing lately?"

The answer may be anything from exploring the wilds of Asia to writing a new book—and there is a new one, "PPoison Arrows," out April 19. But with that long out of the way, she has something different. She has just compiled a partial "Survey of Women's Work in the Literary Field," supplementary to the catalogue of the Biblioteca Femina, Women's World Library she assembled for the International Women Writers' Conclave at the Century of Progress Exhibition in 1933.

As the vice convener of letters of the International Council of Women, Mrs. Seton has done much to bring the work of women in art and literature in the various countries to the attention of women in other countries. The war, of course, has interfered, but the survey, which was a year in preparation, has been completed. Mrs. Seton also enlisted wide participation in the International Women's Art Exhibit at the Riverside Museum in New York, from October 17 of last year to January 14 of this year.

She did much of the work of securing cooperation in this, as well as the literary survey, at the triennial session of the International Council of Women at Edinburgh in 1938. This brought together women from countries throughout the world, some since wiped off the map.

GRACE THOMPSON SETON

The difficulties of publishing the pamphlet giving results of the literary survey were many, including that of not having available the type with special accents required in Polish, modern Greek and Hungarian. This had to be made before the booklet could be printed.

One fact revealed in Mrs. Seton's survey was that award winners and best sellers seldom made both classes. Pearl Buck was the exception.

Mrs. Seton, during her stay here, will take part in the biennial convention of the National League of American Pen Women as chairman of awards the week of April 21. She will also attend, as a guest of honor, the annual "brunch" of the A. B. C. Club, to be given at the Kennedy Warren Sunday, April 21. She has taken an apartment at the Kennery Warrent until the end of April.

In Baton Rouge, La., where she spent part of the winter, she was made an honorary member of Alpha Kappa Chapter of Theta Sigma Phi journalism sorority, at Louisiana State University.

When I interviewed her yesterday, she was looking especially smart in a spring suit and gay frill of silk and straw braid. A little hat formed of a puckered learned with interest of her surveys of other people's books; I couldn't help but congratulate the sorority on making her an honorary member but, as usual, while I talked to her, I kept contrasting her work in the literary field with her life of adventure when really in the field. It is hard to picture this alert clubwoman (twice national president of the Penwomen) shooting tigers, collecting specimens of bats and finding her way about jungles where no white woman had been before.

Her book, coming out April 19, tells about her explorations in Indo-China a few years ago . . . and ser survey of the activities of women there promises to be in sharp contrast to that she has recently been making in the realm of literature.

D. A. R. Committee Will Entertain Citizenship 'Pilgrim'

Mrs. Van Zandt Talks on War

Following the luncheon of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association at the Highlands yesterday, Mrs. Lydia Van Hagan Van Zandt gave a talk on "European War and Diplomacy" for the benefit of the association's scholarship fund.

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, and Miss Janet Richards, pioneer lecturer on current events, were guests of honor with Mrs. Van Zandt at the luncheon. Mrs. Murray Beocock, national president, was there from Charlottesville, as was Mrs. Jay Winston Johns, president of the Capital division, who presided.

Mrs. Van Zandt discussed the peace terms of the Finnish-Russian Treaty, using a large map which she colored to show the territory that will go to Russia.

"Soviet Russia's demand for a railroad to be built from the White Sea to the north shore of the Gulf of Bothnia to connect with lines at the Swedish frontier, her seizure of the ice-free port of Petsamo and her demand for free passage to Norway all indicate that Stalin has plans for further expansion in Scandinavia," said the speaker.

Mrs. Van Zandt described her flight from Oslo up the Norwegian coast over fjords and glaciers to Tromso. "It was most scenicand when we landed to deliver mail at the sleepy little fishing village in the Josing Fjord, we had no idea it would ever be the setting for the dramatic rescue of the 300-odd British seamen from the German prison ship Altmark," she said.

Mrs. Van Zandt pointed out that more British activity can be expected in these neutral waters if German ships continue to use them for transporting Swedish ore from the port of Narvik." These fjords and the string of islands just outside them form a sheltered waterway within Norway's territorial waters," she said. "If the Allied blockade is to be successful, British and French ships will have to invade these passages and Norway's neutrality will become more and more precarious."

Woman's Guild of Goodwill Industries To Sponsor Benefit Party on May 17

May 17 has been set as the date for the benefit card party and fashion show to be sponsored by the oman's Guild of the Goodwill Industries. It will be held at the Mount Vernon Seminary with Miss Gertrude Lutz as chairman.

Plans for the affair were discussed yesterday at the quarterly business meeting of the guild, at the Industries. Mrs. Samuel Herrick, the president, presided and Harod lSnape, director, spoke.

Woman's Christian Association Reelects Mrs. W. W. Scott

She Will Serve as Society President For Eleventh Year; 70 Attend Tea After Voting at Headquarters

Mrs. William W. Scott was reelected yesterday, for the eleventh year, as president of the Woman's Christian Association which marks its seventieth anniversary this season.

The election of officers took place at the annual meeting held in the headquarters at 1719 Thirteenth street, which has been maintained by the association, since 1873, as a residence for working women.

Others reelected for the coming year are Mrs. Philip Ashford, Mrs. Louis Laudick, and Miss Francis Chickering, vice presidents; Mrs. Robert Lyons, recording secretary; Mrs. Parker Cook, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Harry C. James, treasurer; Mrs. Claude Wright, registrar. The superintendent of residence is Mrs. Luella Poindexter and the assistant is Miss Emma Reeder.

The association was formed 70 years ago through the efforts of O. O. Howard, president of the Young Men's Christian Association, to whose attention the need for such an organization was called. It was during the Administration of President Grant, who was honorary head of the association. The Young Women's Christion Association was organized 35 years later.

The original association here had branches in other cities, which, after the Y. W. C. A. was formed, became affiliated with that. The Washington group, however, decidwed to remain distinct and has continued as the Woman's Christian Association, giving it attention primarily to the needs of older women, while the Y. W. C. A. has programs to include the younger girls as well.

Following hte meeting yesterday, an informal tea was attended by about 75 guests. Mrs. Scott received informally, assisted by members of the executive board.

Among those who poured were Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the Council of Federated Church Women; Mrs. Louis Talmadge Breuinger, president of the Young People's Auxiliary of the New York Avenue Church; Mrs. E. B. Reed and Mrs. Charles Emory Ferguson.

Among the guests were Mrs. James T. Watson, president of the Washington Branch of the League of American Pen Women; Ruth Boyer, president of the Business Women's Council; Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Agnes McCall Parker, Miss Elsa Peterson, president of the Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. John W. Frizzell, past president of the District Federation; Mrs. William Lee Corbin, past president of the Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, president of the Entre Nous Club; Mrs. Albert Evans, Mrs. Gertrude McDonald and Miss Mabel Thurston, honorary member of the association.

Benefit Party

Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, commander of the Women's Field Army for Cancer Control, has announced April 22 as the date of a benefit card party to be held at the Mayflower Hotel at 2 p. m. The coming week there will also be booths in stores where the organization's literature will be distributed and memberships taken.

The committee in charge of the party includes, in addition to Mrs. Biddle, Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, deputy commander; Mrs. Frederic Newburgh, tickets and reservations; Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison, prizes; Mrs. J. Frank Rice, music; Mrs. Paul W. Burk and Mrs. Bell Pickett, candy and cakes, and Mrs. Lauren B. Askew.

THERE ARE PROGRAMS and programs—Yesterday the Congressional Club had one that stood out among all the rest. It was presented by Lucille Barrow Turner who gave "stories in song," Negro spirituals and character sketches.

Friendly, vivacious, with a warmth of sympathy and understanding, she brought the spirit of the Old South into her interpretations. She played her own accomplishments, a musical setting to Negro folklore. Among the songs were "Mammy Rocks My Cradle With Ribbons," "Uncle Robert and the Train;" "The Crap Shootin' Sinner,;" and "When the Stars Fell." At the end, she intoned a prayer or sermon.

She started singing spirituals when she was a student at Sweet Briar College and her classmates used to beg her to entertain them. Later ,at the New England Conservatory of Music and the Emerson School of Expression, she was always "the one who played the guitar and sang while the others made the fudge."

She continued her interest in the folklore of the South after leaving school and decided to use it professionally, spurred on by a motto she discovered on the wall of a little colored school in Mississippi. It read: "Pick up your bucket where you are."

She composes her own melodies or arranges settings for traditional ones, and has recently made Columbia recordings.

Those who poured at the tea after the program were Mrs. Elmer J. Ryan, Mrs. Estes Kefauver, Mrs. Cleveland Newton, Mrs. Foster Stearns, Mrs. Orville Zimmerman and Mrs. Joseph O'Brian.

NEW OFFICERS—The Columbia Heights Art Club has set May 16 for its annual luncheon. Mrs. Robert C. Hibben, who was reelected president at the meeting Thursday at the home of Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, will preside. The club has decided to devote its study next season to Mexico.

Other officers for the coming year are: Mrs. John E. Briggs, vice president; Mrs. Charles K. Hoover, recording secretary; Miss Mary Embrey, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Dudley S. Bright, treasurer; Mrs. George A. Cook, delegate to the federation.

Members of the executive board include Mrs. Hibben, Mrs. Briggs, Mrs. Hoover, Mrs. Anton Heitmuller, Mrs. Audley L. Smith, Mrs. William T. Gill and Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist.

VISIT HEADQUARTERS—Ten members of the Ashton Heights Woman's Club in Arlington yesterday made a tour of the General Federation of Women's Clubs headquarters, 1734 N street. Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, president of the federation, was not in the city, but the visitors were conducted over the building by a member of the staff.

Those in the party were Mrs. J. W. England, the president; Mrs. C. M. Bardwell, Mrs. O. L. Day, Mrs. J. M. Farley, Mrs. D. L. Grantham, Mrs. W. M. Imlay, Mrs. F. R. Mitchell, Mrs. L. E. Putman, Mrs. C. B. Emery and Mrs. A. S. Bales.

MORE INDORSEMENTS—Helen McCabe, who received the indorsement of her own unit, Cooley - McCullough, some time ago for the presidency of the D. C. Department of the American Legion Auxiliary, has now been indorsed by two more units—Nash and Kelleen.

Mrs. Mary K. Killeen, past president of the department and gold star mother, presented her name for the nomination at the Killeen meeting, and Mrs. Mary B. Corwin, past department president, at the Nash.

ON THE CALENDAR—The Washington Branch of the National Story League will present a program of stories on "Nature" for its spring meeting tonight at 8 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A. A silver tea and musicale tomorrow at Girls Club and Hospice, 1525 Sixteenth street, at 4:30 p. m.; Ruth Snodgrass, soprano; Mondell Alderson, barytone, and Arsenio Ralon, violinist, artists.

Court Voids Below-Cost Ban in Md.

Price Dictation By Manufacturers Hit; Fair Trade Act Of 1937 Unaffected

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 5.—A Maryland act of 1939 giving the manufacturer of a product the power to stipulate that retailers could not sell it for less than a price dictated by the manufacturer was declared unconstitutional today by the Court of Appeals.

Supporters of the Fair Trade Act of 1937 were quick to point out, however, that the decision had no effect on that legislation, which passed an Appeals Court test last June and was ruled valid.

The 1937 act, known generally as the Fair Trade Act, gives the manufacturers of trademarked products the right to form a contract with retailers fixing the price at which the product shall be sold. It operates on a voluntary basis.

Was the 1939 Act

The 1939 act, known generally as the "Sales Below Cost Act," covered all products, trademarked or not, and gave no consideration to the retailers' wishes as to the selling price. If the manufacturer wished to invoke the act's provisions, the retailer of his product had to sell it for at least 6 per cent more than it cost him, and the cost had to be calculated according to an involved, technical system set forth in the act.

This, the opinion by Associate Judge Walter J. Mitchell asserted, "unreasonably and arbitrarily interferes with private business."

The decision upheld a ruling by Chief Judge Samuel Dennis of the Baltimore supreme bench in a case involving the Daniel Loughran Co., Inc., and the Lord Baltimore Candy & Tobacco Co., Inc., both wholesale tobacco dealers.

The Loughran firm took the case to the Courtof Appeals on the contention the Lord Baltimore company had violated the 1939 act.

The court criticized the act's provisions in establishing how a product's cost should be figured and its provisions describing what should be considered criminal violations.

Called Burdensome

"No trader embraced in its provisions can conduct his business at any time with any degree of certainty that he is not violating the law, whenever, in his own business discretion, he sells a commodity below cost, without first complying with unnecessary and burdensome regulations placed upon him," the opinion stated.

"He may have no knowledge that his below-cost transactions will injure any competitor within the reasonable radius or zone in which he conducts business, but somewhere or somehow, his below-cost sale has had the result of injuring a competitor in the far end of the State, and he has violated the act."

George Parkhurst, attorney for the Lord Baltimore company, had contended, successfully, that the act's terms were so "vague, indefinit and illusory that the ordinary man cannot understand the meaning of the statute."

Court Probates Col. Bull's Will After Testimony

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winchester, Va., April 5.—The will of Col. E. Llewellyn Bull, disposing of an estate conservatively valued at $350,000 was admitted to probate in Clarke circuit court today after eight witnesses testified before Judge Philip Williams that Col. Bull was mentally competent at the time the will was made.

By the terms of the will, the bulk of the estate which Col. Bull received from his late wife, becomes the property of her two surviving sisters, Mrs. Madeline Borland Pell and Mrs. Alice Borland Wilson.

The property, self-accumulated, estimated at $116,000, was bequeathed one-third to Mrs. Louise Patterson Bull and one-third each to Miss Barbara Bull and Miss Frances Louise Bull. Tangible personal property was left to a brother, William R. Bull.

Under a compromise agreement reached at Rockville, Md., earlier this week, Miss Berenice Merchant, Washington debutante and an adopted daughter, will receive a total of $25,000, of which $10,000 is a direct bequest and $15,000 a payment approved when she withdrew charges Col. Bull was not mentally competent when he made the will.

Smallpox Cases in Va. Drop to Zero in 1939

Richmond, Va., April 5 (AP).—The State Department of Health pointed with pride today to the total absence of smallpox cases in the State last year.

Not a single case of the disease that once scourged Virginia was reported by local health authorities, a compilation of all communicable diseases by Dr. William Grossman of the department disclosed. The eradication by vaccination was gradual—in 1930 there were 264, in 1938 only 5.

Shenandoah School Budget Cut $20,421

Special Dispatch to The Post

Woodstock, Va., April 5.—The Shenandoah County board of supervisors yesterday clipped $20,421.54 from the county school budget submitted by the school board for the 1940-41 session.

The reduced expenditures, if finally adopted April 19, would eliminate six of the fleet of 19 school buses, discontinue services of a school dentist and abolish public school music in the county. Payments on the purchases of buses, totaling more than $10,000, also were stricken from the proposed budget.

The supervisors called a public hearing for 10 o'clock Friday morning, April 19, at the courthouse here for adoption of the school and general county budgets and the fixing of the tax levy.

Hagerstown Plans Record-Making Street Program

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., April 5.—Eight miles of new streets will be built here during the next nine months at a total cost of $263,427. City Engineer Joseph I. Lyon said it is the most ambitious street building program ever attempted in one year in Hagerstown and will include the removal of trolley tracks on one north-south street for a distance of 5,600 feet and the repaving of several streets in the business area. He estimated that 381 men would be given employment for nine months. The city's share of the costs will be $66,201.

Hearing Set In Alexandria Court Probe

To Be Held Publicly Tuesday; Auditors Find Funds Short, Records 'Deplorable'

The first hearing on a Virginia State auditing report which termed records of Alexandria's civil and police courts "deplorable" and revealed a cash shortage of $203 in the accounts will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 in the Alexandria city council chamber, City Manager Carl Budwesky said yesterday. The hearing will be conducted jointly by Budwesky and City Attorney Armistead L. Boothe, to whom the matter was referred by the city council at its regular meeting last week.

Budwesky said all persons involved in the report of the auditing committee, and any other "interested parties" had been invited to attend the hearing, which will be open to the public.

A public hearing on the report was decided on, the city manager said, as the result of requests from parties involved in the report. On behalf of Park E. Ticer, clerk of court during the 3½-year period covered by the audit, Attorney John Barton Phillips requested the city council at its last meeting to hold a public hearing in order to "bring out all facts of the case in public, in fairness to all concerned."

Army Day Dinner

More than 150 legionnaires and guests will attend the annual Army Day dinner of Alexandria Post 24 of the American Legion tonight at 7:30 at the George Mason Hotel.

Representative Gearhart (Republican), of California, will be the principal speaker, while additional talks will be presented by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of Veterans' Affairs; Col. Henry L. Larson, director of the division of plans and policies at Marine Corps headquarters in Washington; Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, of the United States Navy, and Rear Admiral Russell R. Waesche, commandant of the United States Coast Guard.

Among other prominent guests who will join with the Alexandria post in its observance of America's entry into the World War will be Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia; Ralph James, Virginia Department commander of the American Legion, of Hampton; Mrs. Ernest B. Fishburne, Virginia Department president of the Legion Auxiliary, of Roanoke; Representative Howard W. Smith, of this city, and numerous high-ranking Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Marine officers.

William G. Greenan, commander of the Alexandria post, will preside as toastmaster. Everett A. Hellmuth is general chairman for the program.

Woman Awarded $1,500

A judgment of $1,500 was awarded Mrs. Opal Evans, of Alexandria, by an Alexandria Corporation Court jury, in her suit against the Boulevard Apartments, Inc., for injuries sustained in an explosion which occurred in her apartment October 16. Mrs. Evans sued the corporation in the sum of $10,000, charging that she was seriously injured in a blast that occurred as she was depositing garbage in an incinerator.

The jury also reversed a verdict of the civil court which awarded a judgment of $262.50 to George W. Walters against the P. & M. Construction Co., as commission Walters claimed was due him for sale of a house.

Members of the jury were Howard W. Baggett, foreman; B. T. Gallagher, E. I. Browner, Alvin Powell and Robert L. Agner.

600 to Attend Student Parley In Warrenton

Warrenton, Va., April 5.—More than 600 delegates of the High School Students Cooperative Associations of northern Virginia are expected to attend the annual convention here on April 17.

Adult and student opinion will be expressed on efforts to unify the thinking of parents and children. Discussion also will center on four characteristics of good citizenship—courtesy, cooperation, proper work habits and dependability.

Among the speakers will be Miss M. Freida Koontz, State secretary of the Student Cooperative Association, and C. L. Emerick, superintendent of Loudoun County schools.

Officers of the northern Virginia association are: Miss Elinor Myers, Leesburg, chairman; Kite Roseberry, Manassas, vice chairman; Pollyanna Booth, Warrenton, secretary, and R. Worth Peters, principal of Manassas public schools, program director. Roosevelt Names Tavenner As U. S. Attorney in Virginia

Woodstock Man Is Chosen for Vacancy In Western District

By the Associated Press

Frank S. Tavenner, jr., of Woodstock, Va., was nominated by President Roosevelt yesterday to be United States attorney for the Western District of Virginia.

Tavenner, whose nomination was submitted to the Senate, was named to fill a vacancy caused by the recent death of Joseph Chitwood. He had been serving as district attorney since Chitwood's death in a temporary capacity through appointment by Judge John Paul, of the Western Virginia District Court.

Tavenner had the indorsement of Senators Byrd and Glass, of Virginia.

Tavenner's expected confirmation will make possible the filling of two vacancies in the posts of assistant district attorney for the Western District.

One will be created by the elevation of Tavenner, for some time assistant district attorney, and the other by the recent appointment of Joel Flood to a State circuit judgeship.

The Virginia Senators have announced they would take no part in the appointment of these assistants, since the officers were not subject to Senate confirmation, and they felt that since the responsibility of the office would be Tavenner's, he should be given free rein in choosing his own assistants.

Byrd said all applications for the appointment received here, reported to number nearly 50, had been forwarded to Tavenner.

Battle Lines Drawn in Md. Primaries

Bruce and Gierttoski Against Radcliffe; Broening and Nice In G.O.P. Senate Race

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 5.—Battle lines in Maryland's senatorial primary campaign were drawn officially tonight as the deadline for filing passed with three Democrats and two Republicans on the secretary of state's list of candidates.

Democratic National Committeeman Howard Bruce, Senator George L. Radcliffe and Vincent Gierttoski, all of Baltimore, were the three Democrats in the running. Former Gov. Harry W. Nice and former Mayor William F. Broening, also of Baltimore, were the only Republican candidates.

Passage of the deadline, fixed by statute as 30 days prior to the election for senatorial candidates, focused attention on the Congressional races where would-be candidates still have ten days in which to pay filing fees.

To date, the secretary of state's list shows 29 candidates in the six districts, with the hottest fights apparently due in the First and Third districts. Six Democrats have filed in each. An additional candidate is expected to qualify in the First District.

Two Republicans have filed in the First District, one each in the Second, Third ad Fourth; none in the Fifth and three in the Sixth.

Three Democrats have filed in the Second, three in the Fourth, two in the Fifth and one in the Sixth.

Following are the Congressional candidates who have filed:

FIRST DISTRICT—Democrats: Dudley G. Roe, Sudlersville; Representative David J. Ward, Salisbury; Thomas F. Johnson, Snow Hill; E. Moores Lee, Chesapeake City; H. H. Balch, Easton; Olin R. Higgins, Cambridge. Republicans: F. Kirk Maddrix, Crisfield; William H. Lloyd, Lloyds.

SECOND DISTRICT—Democrats: John D. C. Duncan, Towson; Representative William P. Cole, Towson; Charles J. Wells, Baltimore. Republican: Theodore F. Brown, Westminster.

THIRD DISTRICT—Democrats: John K. Kennedy, Vincent L. Palmisano, John G. Callan, Alexander J. Lane, Representative Thomas D'Alesandro, George D. Iverson, jr., all of Baltimore. Republican: Frank R. Long, Kensington.

FOURTH DISTRICT—Democrats: Stewart Brown, John H. Meyer, Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy, all of Baltimore. Republican: William J. Stockdale.

FIFTH DISTRICT—Democrats: Dr. John William Klemm, Mount Rainier; Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, Upper Marlboro.

Ex-Policeman, Father of Three, Is Found Hanged

Charles Willard Lonas, 29, a former Montgomery County special policeman and the father of three small children, was found hanging from a rafter in the cellar of his home last night at Perry street and Concord avenue, Kensington.

Lonas was found by members of his family. Policeman E. R. Jones of Kensington, said he had talked with Lonas earlier in the day and that he seemed "very despodent."

Dr. Cyrus Hawk, of Rockville issued a certificate of suicide. Mrs. Lonas and her children, George, Charles and Mary Lonas, survive.

5 Applicants Weighed For Medical Examiner

Baltimore, April 5 (AP).—The State industrial accident commission is considering five applications for the post of medical examiner to succeed the late Dr. Robert P. Bay.

The names were sent to the commission by State Employment Commissioner Harry J. Jones after the physicians had passed examination given by Jones and a special medical examining board.

The five are Dr. Amos R. Koontz, Dr. Norman C. Marvel, Dr. Herbert C. Blake and Dr. Howard M. Kern, Baltimore, and Dr. N. B. Steward, Laurel.

Ann Sheridan Fools Harvard At the Earle

'Oomph' Queen Stars In Screen Farce; All-Girl Stage Revue

"IT ALL CAME TRUE." Warner Brothers picturization of a screen play adapted from Louis Bromfield's novel by Michael Fessier and Lawrence Kimble, starring Ann Sheridan, with Jeffrey Lynn, Humphrey Bogart, ZaSu Pitts, Una O'Connor, Jessie Busley, John Litel, Grant Mitchell, Feliz Bressart, Charles Judels, Brandon Tynan, Howard Hickman and Herbert Vigran. Directed by Lewis Seiler. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

It's a man-trap week, "oomph" week and all-girl week at the Earle. There's Ann Sheridan hitting on all 12 cylinders. There are beautiful young girls, frisky old girls, clowning girls, dancing girls, acrobatic girls. Mobster Humphrey Bogart is pushed right into the cinema balkground by cumulative girl-power and Maestro Jo Lombardi abdicates the Earle bandstand in favor of that twinkling Roxyette, Eileen Ritter.

Ann Sheridan's performance in "It All Came True" should make those meanie Harvardites go off in a corner and turn their faces to the wall. She plays a Broadway show girl who's always getting into jams, knows all the answers except "Yes." She skips through this part of picture in the manner flip and nifty. But it is when she gets in the night spot sequences that La Sheridan really gets her teeth into her role. In a Gay Nineties costume, she is the most gorgeous on the 1940 screen, in song delivery she can't be topped except, perhaps, by Marlene Dietrich. So that is Miss Ann (Harvard Failure) Sheridan.

From Bromfield Story

"It All Came True" preserves the dynamic quality of the Bromfield book. The story spicily blends the aimosphere of gangland, a brownstone boarding house and the theater. "Chips" Maguire (Humphrey Bogart), on the run from the police, hides out in the old boarding house where live such quaint characters as ZaSu Pitts, who thinks that men are always chasing her; Grant Mitchell, a writer of awful verse; Felix Brossart, an ex-magician; Brandon Tynan, who isn't quite right in the head, and Una O'Connor and Jessie Busley as the bustling old proprietresses.

Naturally, Mr. Bogart nearly goes plumb insane in these surroundings. Especially when, as it happens, his room is decorated with stuffed monkeys, owls and eagles. As a means of relieving his nervous tension, he figures a way of turning the house into a night spot, "The Roaring 90's."

Lillian Carmen Sings

If Ann Sheridan didn't possess a peculiarly electric quality, the picture would be stolen from her by the dozen-odd brilliant troupers of the cast. Humphrey Bogart's humor and toughness are of star quality. Zasu Pitts is a panic whether she's tight, panic-stricken or seeing imaginary lovers. That tiny veteran, Una O'Connor, shines as a pepperytempered old lady, while Jessie Busley is equally good as a sugary type. Grant Mitchell, Felix Bressart and Charles Judels are other standout character actors. Headlined Jeffrey Lynn has to contend with a rather weak part. He gets Ann Sheridan, but she breaks from his arms to kiss Mr. Bogart good-bye just as that worthy is captured by the law.

Lillian Carmen deservedly heads the all-girl stage revue. All theater and night spot singers should take a look and listen to her "Darktown Strutters' Ball." We've never seen the number done with more dash and cleverness.

Those bouncing clownettes, Sylvia and Clemence, prove that girls can go in for rough and tumble comedy just as well and better than many of the boys. Another laugh success was the act of the Five Herzogs, acrobatic lassies, who were interrupted hilariously by a volunteer from the audience. The three Dancing Debs do a series of very technical and graceful dances. Top number of the Roxyettes this week was their "Reno Widows," in which they appear in flowing veils and long black net hose, both very alluring.

MARY HARRIS.

Columbia

Maj. Rogers and his Rangers trekked down F street to the Columbia yesterday for another go at Washington's big time after a rousing week at the Palace. In "Northwest Passage," M-G-M has produced a film of mammoth proportions. It is a motion picture in every sense of the phrase, a film of action and vastness such as can be encompassed only by the limitless eye of the camera.

Outstanding performance of the film, needless to say, is Spencer Tracy's finely wrought, grim characterization of Maj. Roberts. As in most Tracy pictures, the honors are his all the way. Walter Brennan contributes his usual excellent support in a rough-hewn role that is a "natural" for the Brennan talents. Robert Young abandons his twentieth century cocktail-shaker and becomes an eighteenth century dilitante. As the would-be artist who falls in with the Rogers boys, Young is smoothly at ease. Ruth Hussey is the object all sublime of Young's affections, and the rest of the large cast is admirably suited to their roles.

R. O., Jr.

Howard

For the second time this season, Andy Kirk, ably supported by his featured artists, June Richmond, Mary Lou Williams and Pha Terrell, plus his stout band of rhythmeers, lay down a syncopated barrage that conquers even the most exacting of this week's Howard Theater swing addicts.

Currently on the upswing, the Kirk outfit uses for their musical ammunition a modern version of "Marcheta" and warmer tunes, "Zonky" and "Wham" among others. Hefty swingstress, June Richmond, scores heavily with "Man I Love," and "Between 18th and 19th on Chestnut Street," while ace of the keyboard, Mary Lou Williams, brings down the house with her medley and arrangement of "The Sheik." Male vocalist, Pha Terrell's "Indian Summer" sells him solidly.

Among talents displayed in a flashy quick-time revue are Teddy Hale, diminutive personality out of Gotham's Kit Kat Club, with powerful pipes and peppy feet; Carl and Henrietta, advanced students of tapology; the tried and seasoned comedy team, Mason and Vigalpa, with the Addison Carey precision line.

Mickey Rooney's 'Young Tom Edison,' At Capitol, Is Disarmingly Vivid Lad

Inventor's Boyhood Unique and Delightful; Vilma, Buddy Ebsen Starred on Stage

"YOUNG TOM EDISON." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a screen play by Bradbury Foote, Dore Schary and Hugo Butler, based on material gathered by H. Alan Dunn and starring Mickey Rooney. Supporting cast includes Fay Bainter, George Bancroft, Virginia Weidler, Eugene Pallett, Victor Kilian, Bobbi Jordan, J. M. Kerrigan, Lloyd Corrigan, John Kellog, Clem Bevans, Ely Malyon and Harry Shannon. Directed by Norman Taurog. Previewed Tuesday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

By Richard L. Coe

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

Put "Young Tom Edison" on your required list.

The Capitol's newcomer is a rollicking comedy of a spirited lad and his family, a sort of "Life With Father" with its setting in Michigan's Port Huron rather than on New York's Madison avenue. The story that it tells is lively and ingratiating; what would ordinarily be an excellent film becomes a classic portrait of a great man.

As the boyish inventor, Mickey Rooney gives the performance of his young life. Those who in the past have been irritated by the mannerisms of Andy Hardy or the brightness of his babe in arms must surely be won over to the opinion of those of us who view the smallish fellow as one of the fine performers of a day in which the director is ever becoming more and more important.

Those episodes that take place in "Young Tom Edison" are little flashes of reminiscence which have come down in the inventor's family from his boyhood. In this boy's biography they are knitted together in a slight but continuous narrative based, in part, on his discomfiture when his curiosity gives him the surname of "addled."

Virginia Weidler Delightful

When Tom's sister, so perfectly brought to lively life by Virginia Weidler, is in trouble with a school lesson, Tom taps out the answer to her in Morse code. When they are sent in shame to stand in the cloak room, he mixes a smoky chemical that sends the fire department zooming down Main street with Port Huron's men for the horses. When Tom wants to make some cash, he starts his own newspaper, getting the latest details of the Civil War from an obliging officer who suggests a financial coup for a much harassed father. When Tom has a combustible to slither off a train into a river, you'll laugh with a relishing joy.

Tom has his troubles, too. His mother seems to be the only person in the world who understands his questioning nature. She it is who always sets things straight with father. When her sudden illness demands a midnight operation, Tom's resourcefulness multiplies gas light by mirror power. When a washed out bridge makes a railroad accident imminent, "mad" Tom Edison saves the day with his alert sister's help.

Fay Bainter's mother is lovingly conceived, too, with that proper restraint so characteristic of the skilled veteran. George Bancroft is especially believable as the father, and Eily Malyon's school teacher is an outstanding bit. Unless you're bitter and crusty, you'll have a wonderful time at "Young Tom Edison."

Miss Gainsworth Back

The Capitol's stage revue is headlined by the unabashed Buddy Ebsen, teamed again after too long with his sister, Vilma. This team presents dance routines that went over socko with yesterday's second house. "Sing Before Breakfast," which they did in the films a year or two ago, is one of their best numbers, but they score most solidly with their peppery cake-walk.

Marjorie Gainsworth, the Grace Moore of the four-a-day, returns with snatches from "Show Boat," a new ditty and Bishop's classic, "Lo, Hear the Gentle Lark." Like Miss Moore, this golden-topped soprano gains much of her effect through her chic appearance and brittle elan. Not in best voice yesterday, obviously suffering from a cold, Miss Gainsworth nonetheless had the audience by its toes.

Novelty per se in the new revue are the Kanazawa Japs who achieve the seemingly impossible things in their odd metier of tossing barrels about by their toes. That's what they do and it looks plenty easy. It isn't.

The Rockets—parade in honor of cherry blossom time and Pan-American Union Week. Sam Jack Kaufman lays the operas low in his overture, but "Young Tom Edison' 'is what will send you home happy.

GEORGE GALLUP, head of the Gallup Poll, confessed that his employes have encountered much difficulty in conducting polls in Louisiana—particularly in New Orleans, where the average citizen has been accustomed to political corruption . . . The Gallup workers who canvassed New Orleans always were confronted with a demand for $2—even for straw-votes.

FRANK MURPHY, who was kicked upstairs to the United States Supreme Court bench after he lost the Governorship of Michigan—because of the sit-down strikes—is expected to write the opinion in the Apex Co. case, which involves a sit-down strike . . . Count Jerzy Potocki, the Polish Ambassador, will resign as a result of Germnay's White Paper. He feels that his usefulness has been impaired . . . The Ranee of Sarawak, whose husband is the absolute ruler of 500,000 natives of the British protecotrate in Borneo, will be a guest of honor at Leon & Eddie's. It will be the first time a celebrity, instead of taking a bow, will have the audience bow to her.

SEYMOUR MAGOON, one of the prisoners held in the Murder Syndicate cases, will be indicted in the Bronx, for murder . . . A census-taker came to Magoon's cell Wednesday, and asked the regular census-questions. To the question, "Residence?" Magoon answered: "Temporary." To the question, "Occupation?" Magoon answered: "Vacationing." . . . Fritz Mandl, who has been purchasing many ships, will go to the Argentine this month, with Dodero, his new business associate . . . The Lou Holtzes are relinquishing their New York residence, and will become permanent citizens of California . . . Haila Stoddard, who worked 65 weeks in "Tobacco Road" before marrying Jack Kirkland, the author, was invited by the cast to rejoin them. She refused, explaining: "I can't do better than marry the Boss" . . . The Segal Lock & Hardware Co. has completed its setup for manufacturing projectiles and grenades . . . Contrary to published reports, Stephen Longstreet did not plug his own book, "Decade," in the Thomas Burton column he writes for the Saturday Review of Literature. M-G-M now is bidding for the screen-rights to that book . . . The anonymous author of "History of Social Work," the one hour Living Newspaper play presented at Madison Square Garden for the Greater New York Fund Drive, is H. R. ARTURO GODOY returned to New York, and went to the Havana-Madrid. Ray Bolger saw him dancing there, and asked: "Are you practicing for your return match with Joe Louis?" . . . "Oh, no," said Godoy. "When I train for the Louis fight, I'll be in bed by this hour, counting sheep" . . . Bolger replied: "Don't bother counting higher than ten."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 5.

What a delightful interview I had with two Catholic priests who came out to look over the final shooting script for "The Life of Knute Rockne." Father John Cavanaugh, vice president of Notre Dame, and his elder colleague on the faculty, Father Eugene Burke—were like a couple of kids when it came to seeing front and back of movieland. Not only do they believe the Rockne film will be a great picture, but they believe movies are the finest institution in the land. Wide-eyed they wandered through the studio—standing aghast when they met Eddie Robinson and found he really doesn't wear a beard—mouths open as they watched Perc Westmore make up Pat O'Brien to the "the spittin' image of 'Rock.'"

HOPPER

Father Burke was disappointed at one portion of his visit to the Disney Studios. He said, "They took us into a room with loads of filing cabinets and about 5,000 gags. But they were all lousy." (Yes, so help me, "lousy" is the word he used.)

Of the "Sea Hawk" set, Father Cavanaugh said he never saw such a gang of thugs in one spot before. They're both crazy about Gail Page as "Rock's" wife. Gail has the essential qualities of "Mrs. Rock."

They liked the studio treatment of the monks in "Brother Orchid." Monks aren't long-faced, sour individuals. They're human—a lot of them with a sparkling wit.

While talking with Jackie Cooper, he told me that he took Leila Ernst to a matinee of "Gone With the Wind"—'twas the second time for both. "It was then too early for dinner, so we just bowled for a couple of hours, dined at the Derby, danced at Ciro's—and shucks! we couldn't do anything else, because we both had an early call to work next morning."

Jackie vows he's playing the field as far as women are concerned, and Judy Garland is his best friend. "In fact, she's my only real friend," says Jackie. "Oh, you meet lots of people, but Judy's the real stuff. She's a pal." And I learned the other night when he took her out and the battery went dead in his car, Jackie carried her through the rain to the nearest service station.

It's well known that Garbo and Mrs. Harrison Williams attended the circus party at Palm Springs, but did you know their companion, Mr. Brown, tried to get them in free—because they "just wanted to peek?" Doorman said, "We have the biggest stars inside—who paid $10 to peek. If you three want to look-see, it will cost you 30 bucks." It did.

Film Players Well-Drilled in Divorce Drama

'I Want a Divorce' Title Applies to Stars and Associates

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, April 5.—Paramount Studio discovered today to its chagrin that almost everybody connected with "I Want a Divorce," a preachment against breaking marital ties, has been through the mill at least once. Tch-tch-tch.

Only exception is Mickey Kuhn, aged 6. Everybody else from producer to press agent had shed one or more helpmates.

One consolation is the fact that it is almost impossible to manufacture any movie without including divorcees in the cast. You can count on half the fingers of one hand the really big-time stars who yet are married to their original mates.

All-Encompassing List

The manufacturers of "I Want a Divorce" stack up something like this:

George Arthur: The producer, divorced once in his early youth.

Joan Blondell: The leading lady, divorced from George Barnes, the cameraman, whom she charged with frightening her "to death" the way he drove their automobile.

Dick Powell: The leading man, now married to Miss Blondell, divorced from a girl he married in Pittsburgh, Pa., years ago.

Conrad Nagel: Divorced from a Los Angeles society woman.

Frank Fay: Divorced by Barbara Stanwyck, who charged he once threatened to throw her in their swimmong pool. Miss Stanwyck since has married Robert Taylor.

Gloria Dickson: Separated from Perc Westmore, the makeup man, and insisting she intends to divorce him as soon as she finishes her part in the antidivorce picture.

Ralph Murphy: The director. Divorced long ago.

Adela Rogers St. John: Author of the original story, divorced three times.

Frank Butler: Writer of the scenario, divorced twice.

Further Complications

And that isn't all. The whole cast has read the script and still insists, individually and collectively, that it is mighty happy it is divorced.

That still isn't all. The studio is seeking cooperation of clergy and courts to indorse the picture, which is perhaps the first ever filmed as a direct attack upon divorce.

So while Divorcee Murphy puts Divorcees Powell, Blondell, Nagel and Fay through their paces on stage eight, we dropped into the office of Divorcee Arthur for a chat about the evils of divorce.

"I know the marital status of the cast may seem a little peculiar for this particular picture," he said, "but you must admit that at least we have a cast of experience. When they say anything about divorce, they know what they're talking about.

Judge Lindsay's Inspiration

"Furthermore our film is directed particularly against those leeches who call themselves lawyers, grab a tearful woman and, instead of trying to get her to kiss and make up with her husband, tell her that what she needs is a divorce.

"So far as we can discover, a large percentage of divorces are caused by people being egged on into court, instead of being persuaded to try again."

His story is based upon the unique court of children's relations, established in Los Angeles by Judge Ben B. Lindsey, the compassionate marriage advocate.

Judge Lindsey took a big court room, removed the benches, and partitioned it into private offices. In each he placed one of his deputies. Anybody who thinks he wants a divorce must bring his children and embattled spouse in to see one of the deputies, who does his level best to turn hate back into love. If the deputy has no luck, then the judge takes a hand. He says that in a large part of the cases he achieves lasting reconciliations.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

New York, N. Y., April 5 (INS).—Rushing between radio rehearsals I heard news of the most important Hollywood deal in months. Jesse Lasky has signed with Jack Warner to produce "The Amazing Story of Sergeant Alvin C. York" on the Warner lot. Two million dollars will be spent on the screen biography of the World War hero Gen. Pershing called "the greatest civilian soldier of modern times." Right after the war I met Sergt. York and I'll never forget his great modesty. As the soldier who single handed captured 132 German machine gunners, he could have written his own ticket for vaudeville and personal appearances. But he refused to commercialize on his fame and went back to the hills of Tennessee.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Now he is 53 years old and when he comes to Hollywood to supervise the war scenes, it will be the first thing he will ever have done professionally. His only interest is raising money for more schools in Tennessee—and such a fund is part of his agreement with Lasky, Jack Warner and Hal Wallis. So far, no one is cast for the York role—but don't faint from surprise if it turns out to be Jimmy Cagney.

Snapshots of Hollywood and New York collected at random: My first night in New York was spent seeing "Hellzapoppin" as the guest of Olsen and Johnson. Guess I am one of the few people in the film colony who hadn't seen this riotously funny play. One of the funniest cracks in the show was the introduction of a boy not more than eight years old who was hailed as George Jessel's father-in-law!

Visited backstage and met Johnson's pretty daughter, Adelaide Moffat, who married William Buckner (the broker sentenced to the penitentiary) at the Club Versailles with several of her husband's friends. She tells me she starts a singing engagement soon at one of the night spots; Virginia Peine, in a tricky white hat, danced with Quentin Reynolds and Gloria Stuart and Arthur Sheekman were also on hand; ran into Franchot Tone, who is very happy over the success of "The Fifth Column," at the Stork Club with pretty, blonde Adele Jergen, of the "DuBarry" company.

Flora Robson, looking not half as austere as she dos on the screen, dancing with an attentive escort; Tyrone Power and Annabella flew to Boston to see Lunt and Fontanne in their play, returning in time for a late snack at the Stork Club; Ethel Merman at a midnight show of "Rebecca" raving about Joan Fontaine; hear from Hollywood that Mrs. Harrison Williams has checked into the Beverly Hills Hotel and is the social sensation of the town; the Eddie Lowe's celebrated their fourth anniversay with the Charlie Morrisons at Ciro's; Joe Schenck and Connie Bennett celebrated her return to Hollywood at Perino's Sky Room.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

"Pinocchio" continues to delight the heart and gladden the eye in its long Keith's run. Safe it is to say this is one of the season's Must productions, for adult and child, for cynic and sophomore.

For the third week of "Pinocchio's run, RKO-Keith's has added the latest edition of the "March of Time." "Canada at War" is the title of this release, especially timely this week after the self-avowed hope of a certain Canadian official to bring the United States into the European war. The film emphasizes the importance of the Maple Leaf to the British Lion.

Having been adjectived excessively before as well as during its showing, there is scant use for a redusting of glossy words to describe "Pinocchio's" enchantment. It is like trying to tell someone why sunshine is wonderful.

If your little boy is aghast at the enormity and ferocity of the whale, it will probably all be counterbalanced nicely by the flirtatious beauty of the goldfish, Cleco. And if the knavery of Honest John sets his milk teeth on edge, there is always the purry warmth of Figaro, the cat.

Kindergarten morals and the method of their teachment for the moment escape us, but it does seem a fine way to tell little boys not to tell lies to let them see Pinocchio's ears elongate and his voice become a bray when he allows his tongue to conquer his ubiquitous conscience, Jiminy Cricket.

Two Homers Help Nats Defeat Atlanta, 6 to 2

The Washington Post Sports

 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, APRIL 6, 1940 17

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Atlanta, Ga., April 5.—If Dutch Leonard squeezed the hand of the manager of the Atlanta club today with a little more vigor than the customary greeting between old teammates, it was perfectly understandable. Washington's knuckle ball ace still considers himself very much in the debt of Paul Richards.

POVICH

Leonard was free to admit it today before the Nats took the field against the Atlanta club. As Richards batted fungoes to his Atlanta infield, the usually silent Leonard pointed to the Atlanta manager and said:

"There's the fellow who made me throw my knuckle ball. He's the first catcher I ever had who wouldn't shake me off when I wanted to throw a knuckler. What a friend he turned out to be. He put me back in the big leagues after Brooklyn let me go."

Richards wasn't the Atlanta manager back in 1936 when Leonard came to the Crackers as a Brooklyn cast-off. He was merely the club's catcher—a cast-off himself. The Giants sent him to the A's on waivers. Connie Mack kept him briefly. Richards didn't please Mack. Fresh from the curveball National League, Richards started calling for curves from Mack's young pitchers whose repertoire consisted of fast balls. Finally one day in Boston when Richards continued to call for curves with the result that a half dozen batters walked, Mack exploded. On the bench, the old gentleman stood up and shouted:

"For heaven's sake, Richards, call for some fast balls. Good gracious, these kids can't pitch curves."

Leonard agreed that Richards was by no means the world's greatest catcher. "But as far as I'm concerned, he had more courage than any man who ever caught me to that point. The first time I pitched to him I got the surprise of my life.

"I was fooling around with my knuckle ball in Atlanta—they wouldn't let me pitch it in Brooklyn—and in my first game for the Crackers I was doing pretty good with my knuckler. It was a close game, and there were a couple on base, the batter had me three and one. Then I got the surprise of my life. Richards was back there calling for my knuckler. It looked pretty risky to me and I tried to shake him off, but he insisted on the knuckler. We got away with it, too.

"My knuckler wasn't as hot then as it is now. It would make any catcher look bad. How could they know how it would break if I didn't know myself, and I was throwing it. But Richards didn't seem to care. He called for it all season and gave me the confidence I needed. When I left Brooklyn, where the catchers wouldn't let me throw it, I had just about given up on the knuckler. If I hadn't found a catcher who was willing to take his chances of looking like a bum to the fans, I guess I'd be in some bush league right now.

"My fast ball wasn't good enough and I knew it. But when Richards let me pitch the knuckler, it helped my fast ball. I wasn't any faster, but I had the batters on edge by mixing 'em up. Richards really befriended me back there when it looked as if the Leonards were going to live off minor league salaries."

Richards is modest enough about the whole thing. "Sure, I'd call for his knuckler," he said. "Dutch showed me right off the bat that his knuckler was the only thing he could get by with. It wasn't any fun trying to catch that thing, but it helped us to win ball games.

"Anyway, what the heck was the difference whether we lost ball games by passed balls or by having some guy knock a pitch out of the lot? Dutch could get the knuckler over the plate pretty good, and he wasn't going to walk many. It would get away from me plenty, but that didn't bother. I wanted the hitters to keep swinging. They couldn't do much more with that knuckler than fluff it into the air or beat it into the ground."

Leonard has gone to the mound five times for the Nats this spring and not until yesterday did any club score a run against him. But he does not owe his spring success to his knuckle ball. "My knuckler is not much good yet," he was saying today. "In another week, I ought to be ready.

"I have to fool around with it at least a month before my knuckler is any account. I can make it break now, but it breaks high. It's got to break low before it's a good pitch. Any time I throw a high pitch, it's my fast ball or else a knuckler has got away from me.

"Tommy Bridges is the same. He's the best curve-baller in the league. But his curve isn't worth a nickle if it's high. It's that low baby that gets the hitters out. I've got to have a downward break on my knuckler and a sympathetic catcher if I want to win 20 again this year. I know Rick Ferrell will call for the knuckler and take the rap if it gets away from him. I'll take the rap if I can't keep it down there."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 5.—We have an idea that when Signor Mussolini gets himself a load of Antonio Galento, with that hairy wave of fat rolling over Tony's belt, he is going to decide not to accept Two Ton's generous invitation to box at the Rome World Fair of 1942.

CONSIDINE

Seems that Two Ton and Bruno Mussolini, son of the Chin, have been exchanging mash notes ever since Bruno was named president of the Italian Boxing Federation and Tony has offered to lead a contingent of American-born Italian fighters to the 1942 fair (provided, of course, the price was right).

Tony physically is a gross caricature of all the things Mussolini has been preaching against. No dictator who made his spade-bearded cabinet take runs through the woods with him, or who forced his party leaders to show their aptitude for statesmanship by vaulting over fences, is going to reverse himself violently enough to endorse our flabby, Falstaffian fisticuffer.

Mussolini has created a lean, lithe Nordic Latin as the model of Italian youth. The presence in Italy of a beer-drinking, fun-loving larded figure like Galento probably would set Mussolini's dream youth back 50 years. Two Ton's flair for speaking his mind also would be distressing to any of his sponsors in Italy. On March 15 when his tax was due, Tony said, as is his right, that the Government was robbing him and that if he had good sense he'd start a racket like himself. A similar statement in Italy would be enough to have him lugged off to a sneezer.

"Dear Sir: (Writes Sergio G. Longoria, jr., from Gibara, Oriente, Cuba) I have just read an article signed by you and translated to Spanish by Pepe Conte, sports editor of 'El Pais' in Havana in which you mention about all the Cuban rookies that have been contracted by Joe Cambira, scout of the Washington Senators, and to whom they have treated as really animals, being a offense to Cuban sports, and for which as I am 100 per cent fan of the baseball players, really I am wonder that on a country as United States where are honest men in all the grounds, permit to a baseball club, if this is true, as you assure youself, to make my fellow-citizens, put on a low style in the basebal."

That's telling 'em, Sergio, and a lot better than I could do in Spanish.

Eleven or 12 years ago two of the bitterest rivals on the American turf were Col. Ed Bradley's Blue Larkspur, grandson of Black Toney, and George D. Widener's Jack High.

This year it is anticipated that Black Toney's last great colt, Bimelech, and Jack High's first great one, Andy K., will be the 1940's equine McCoy and Hatfield. A quick glance at their records wouldn't indicate that they are close, but many horsemen think so. Bimelech was unbeaten in six starts as a 2-year-old and scored three victories over Andy K., but in the hopeful at Saratoga he bore out in the backstretch on account of a bad left foreleg, and wandered completely across the track in the homestretch—and then only lost to Bimelech by a neck. Andy K.'s record was further marked by two disqualifications. If the colt has been made sound over the winter, he may well be the one to crack the Bimelech legend.

Of course, it may turn out that neither of them will be worth dissolving in a glue pot by the time the Belmont comes around. A year ago we were all writing about the forthcoming tilts as 3-year-olds between El Chico and Porter's Mite, the unbeaten 2-year-old of 1938 and the 1938 Belmont Futurity winner, respectively. Both are forgotten today.

Schaefer Clinches Second Place

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 5.—Jake Schaefer, Cleveland, clinched secod place in the world's three-cushion billiard tournament today with a 50-to-36 victory over Johnny Layton, of Sedalia, Mo., in 54 innings.

Schaefer still has two games to play, but his record of 13 wins in 18 games assures him of second place behind undefeated Willie Hoppe, of New York, already crowned as the new titleholder.

The Cleveland star, king of billiard balkliners, started the game with a high run of eight and held the lead all the way.

The inning score:

Schaefer800 800 001 000 001 022 110 111 510 000 000 030 000 002 000 240 050 002 231—50. High runs, 8; innings, 54.

Jay Bozeman, Vallejo, Calif., defeated Otto Reiselt, Philadelphia, 50 to 31, in 42 innings in the other afternoon match. The contest ended Reiselt's tournament schedule, leaving him with seven victories in 20 games. Bozeman has two more games to play.

Mangrum, Demaret Lead in Masters Golf

Bobby Jones, Host, Forced To Withdraw

Leaders Post Scores Of 139 for 36 Holes At Augusta; Jones' Back Forces Him Out

By the United Press

Augusta, Ga., April 5.—This is the "Gone With the Wind" country, and Lloyd Mangrum found it out today.

The young professional who fired a sensational 64 yesterday to take the lead in the seventh annual Masters' Golf Championsip bowed like the trees to the whistling wind that swept the course today, and could do no better than a 75.

This score, three over par, gave him a 36-hole total of 139 and threw him into a tie for the halfway mark lead with a fellow Texan, Jimmy Demaret. The laughing Demaret, winner of five championships duringthe winter and a pretournament favorite, followed his first round 67 with a par 72.

Blames Old Man Wind

Mangrum blamed the wind for a round that was 11 strokes worse tha nthe one he played on the opening day. He was deep in the woods on the second and eighth holes, and onthe third and seventh the wind swept his approach shots over the green. The wind bothered him on the putting surface, too, particularly cn the tenth when he three-putted from 15 feet. Mangrum had nine birdies yesterday, but got only two today, on the fifteenth and sixteenth holes. He laid his pitche stiff at the fifteent hand ran down a 15-foot putt on the sixteenth.

Demaret might well have had a 68 o r69 had he been putting well. He 3-putted the tenth and fourteenth greens, the latter from 5 feet. This was excusable, because the pin was on a slope and luck, not skill, was needed to get the ball into it. He bagged 3 birdies on the round, laying his teeshot dead on the fourth, and getting down good putts on the thirteenth and seventeenth.

Nelson Turns on Heat

Two strokes back of the leaders tonight was another Texan, Byron Nelson, National Open champion. After a shaky start on the first nine, Nelson turned on the heat coming home to nick par by 2 strokes on the back nine for a 72. A stroke behind the open king, at 142, were ud Ward, national amateur champion, and Henry Picard, Professional Golfers' Association champ and winner here two years ago. Ward played the best golf of the day, getting a 32 on the first nine and a 36 coming home for a 68.

Picard clipped par by a stroke to get 71 today.

Ward played the sort of golf that earned him the amateur title. He was wild and found traps, but employed a magic blaster to explode close enough to get down in 1 putt.

Bobby Jones Quits

Bobby Jones finally let reason overcome his sportsmanship and gameness, and withdrew from the tournament following a second round of 76. Suffering from bursitis of the left shoulder, and in no

Tigers' Herring Who Lost His Leg Enters Track Meet

Princeton, N. J., April 5 (U.P.).—Don Herring, Princeton track and football star who lost his leg as a result of injuries suffered in a football game last season, planned to compete in an intercollegiate track meet at Chapel Hill, N. C., tomorrow, it was reported here today.

Herring, who motored to Chapel Hill with his father last Tuesday, had planned to leave with the rest of the track squad last Saturday but further adjustments to his artificial leg were found necessary.

Herring, sr., said Track Coach Matty Geis would not let young Herring compete "until he's sure Don won't make a fool of himself by falling down."

Merriwell of Horses Wins Rich Race

By Drew Middleton.

Associated Press Sports Writer

Aintree, England, April 5.—On flying feet whose running rhythm defeated favorites and tortuous turf, Bogskar, "a horse from across the railroad tracks," captured the 102d Grand National Steeplechase today before 125,000 spectators.

A rank outsider at odds that shifted from 33 to 1 to 25 to 1 in the last half-hour, ridden by Sergt. Marvin Michael Jones, Royal Air Force pilot on leave, and bumped hard twice, the little known 7-year-old owned and trained by Lord Stalbridge soundly whipped 29 other jumpers, two of them American-owned.

Carrying 144 pounds, this Merriwell of horses not only slammed down the stretch to lick L. Scott Briggs' highly regarded Macmoffat by four lengths but came within one-fifth of a second of equalling the record of 9 minutes, 20 2-5 seconds set by Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller in 1934.

The triumph brought $20,000 to Bogskar's owner, chicken feed compared with the thousands won by holders of lucky tickets in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes. MacMoffat, held at 8 to 1 and runner-up for the second straight year, got $2,000. J. R. Neill's Gold Arrow, priced at 50 to 1 and six lengths back of MacMoffat in third place, won $800.

Pounding along behind at the finish were 14 others, who managed to stay on four feet for the 4 miles,

Schmitt Leads Attack With Homer, 3 Hits as Mates Slug Opponents

By Jack Mönhall.

Spraying 18 lusty hits to all precincts of the Hilltop diamond, Georgetown's hard-hitting Hoyas wiped out an early deficit and swamped the Dartmouth nine, 14-5, yesterday for their third victory in as many starts.

Leader of the consistent Hilltop attack which produced one or more runs in every inning but the second, was fleet leadoff batter Johnny Scmitt, who clicked off four hits, including a homer, waggled a pair of walks, scored five runs, drove in one and stole two bases for a perfect day at the plate.

While Schmitt and his chief offensive aides, Hank Mylnarski and Russ Miller, were giving the Dartmouth infielders pneumonia from the air currents of their whistling line-drive hits, a pair of Georgetown pitchers were combining to yield only six hits.

Powers Takes Mound

Stocky Johnny Dickelman, G. U.'s highly touted sophomore southpaw, worked the first four innings in fairly good style, surrendering three runs and two hits. Then the lanky Vinnie Powers took over and set the Indians back easily although touched for four hits and three marketrs.

As wild as young left-handed pitchers are wont to be, Dieckelman had himself in trouble almost constantly. He walked six men and often as not was carried to the dangerous 3-and-2 count. However, he displayed a crackling fast ball and a tricky inshoot which the Indians found difficult to handle.

Powers, notoriously wild last season when he was somewhat of a disappointment, showed much-improved control and a blazing outcurve which made the Indians dance. He walked only one batter in his five-inning stretch and gave promise of being the mainstay of the Hoya mound corps.

Off to Shaky Start

Strange as it seems in light of the final score, Georgetown got off to a shaky start and spent the first four innings getting out in front after Dartmouth jumped into a 2-0 advantage. The count was deadlocked at 3-3 at the start of the fifth

Reds-Bosox Game Called—Baseball Supply Exhausted

Greensboro, N. C., April 5 (AP).—The law of supply and demand cut short a heavy-hitting exhibition game between Cincinnati and the Red Sox today when Boston's right-fielder, Leo Nonnenkamp, fouled the last of eight dozen balls from Memorial Park.

The Reds won, 12 to 10.

The same situation ended a game between the same two teams during a dust storm in Florence, S. C., just a year ago tomorrow.

The Reds collected all their runs in the first five innings, including homers by Hershberger and Myers in the second.

Joe Cronin's crew tramped on Whitey Moore for six runs in the first two innings, including a second frame circuit blow by Ted Williams. Taber hit another in the four-run fifth.

Atlanta, Ga., April 5.—Before all of the 200 chill-braving Atlanta fans had settled in their seats today, the Nats knocked a pair of first-inning home runs and were well on their way toward a 6-2 victory they achieved over the Atlanta Crackers.

Jimmy Wasdell drew a bead on the rightfield wall and clouted a pitch over it after George Case, the lead-off batter, had walked. On the next pitch, Buddy Lewis lifted a homer into the same sector. A bit later Cecil Travis and Jimmy Bloodworth pounded a pair of two-baggers into leftfield and the Nats had a 4-run lead and what proved to be the ball game.

It was the Nats' third straight victory and the hapless Crackers' sixth straight defeat at the hands of major league clubs. And the man chiefly responsible for both developments was bow-legged Joe Krakauskas, who reiterated his determination to pitch himself into a top spot on the Nats' staff by contributing an impressive seven-inning job on the Crackers.

Yields Only Three Hits

Krakauskas yielded only three hits to Atlanta in his seven-inning turn. The only run he allowed spawned from one of his four bases on balls, but he compensated for his wildness by striking out three hitters.

The Venezuelan, Alex Carrasquel, continued to lose his grip on a Washington pitching job by giving up two hits and a run to the Crackers in the eighth inning after relieving Krakauskas. He walked the first batter to face him, and after a double play helped him out of trouble, he pitched a home hun to First Baseman Lester Burge.

Wasdell's opening inning wallop was a tremendous clout. It climbed over the terraced fence in right center, where the sign read "386 feet." He beat out a clever bunt later in the game to account for two of the Nats' ten hits.

Travis Batting Leader

But the batting leader of the day was, appropriately enough, the Georgia boy, Cecil Travis. The lanky Riverdale lad who has been a ball of fire with the bat this spring punched out a pair of singles in addition to his first-inning double.

The victim of the Nats' first-inning blitzkrieg was Tom Drake, a Cleveland castoff. The right-handed Drake gave up eight of the Nats' hits in the first six innings he worked. After surviving the first-inning barrage, he surrendered another run in the fifth when Wasdell beat out a drag bunt and was propelled home by Walker's single to right and Travis' long fly to right.

Brill Leaves For New Post At Loyola U.

Former Notre Dame Star Surprised by 3-Year Appointment

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 5.—Marty Brill La Salle football coach since 1933, said good-by today to associates and announced he would leave tomorrow by car for his new job as head coach at Loyola University, of Los Angeles.

"It sure was a surprise when they picked me," Brill said as he confirmed an early morning telephone call from Charles A. Bissonette, chairman of the Loyola athletic board, notifying Brill of his appointment to succeed Mike Pecarovich.

"I was sure the whole thing was off when I went to bed at midnight."

"The appointment is for three years," Brill added, "and I will sign a contract upon arrival on the Coast next Wednesday night."

Bissonette told Brill that Maurice (Clipper) Smith, Villanova coach who accepted and then withdrew from the position, recommended the former Notre Dame star for the position. Smith decided to stay at Villanova after tentatively accepting the post.

Brill, who starred as a blocking back on the 1929 and 1930 teams coached by Knute Rockne, said either Jim Henry, his line assistant at La Salle, or Bernie Bradley, former pupil of Brill at La Salle, were his choices for line coach at Loyola.

Millfang Captures Chantilly Purse at Bowie, Paying $3.30

Port Wales Is Second, Ringie Third

Millsdale Stable Entry Gets Away to Lead, Is Never Headed; Wall Pilots Winner

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Bowie Race Track, April 5.—The Millsdale Stable's Millfang and Jockey Nick Wall, both heavy campaigners on the West Coast during the winter, teamed to win the Chantilly Purse, featuring the Friday program here in the pine woods country. The gelded son of Kai Fang and bred at hmoe drove to the finish line a length and a half in advance of Mrs. D. K. Kerr's Port Wales. Gustave Ring's Dingie was third in the field of the five operating at six furlongs. The winner was the odds-on-favorite at a $3.30 mutuel.

The fish day program drew a crowd of 6,500 and a cold wind swept into the stands maknig conditions more like autumn than spring. However, the breezes served a good purpose during the morning hours and the track was fast throughout the card.

Millfang Never Headed

Millfang was first out of the gate and was never headed while winning his second purse in 10 tries this year. Chief contention came from Port Wales who gave the Millsdale representative a stiff battle cricling toward the stretch. However, Wall went to work on the gelding and he drew out in the closing eighth.

Jockey C. Charlton messed about with Ringie. He had the By-Pass II colt on the inside and outside and the horse finally closed full of run apparently with little help from the saddle department.

A goodly portion of the crowd took down a $76.70 daily double when a pair of paddock tips visited the winner's circle. Mrs. N. K. Beal's Hardy Bud, a first-time starter who has been training at Pimlico, proved the best of a dozen juveniles in the first race under the handling of Jockey Mannie Berg.

Careful Dinah Wins

Careful Dinah, racing for J. H. Louchheim, won by eight lengths in the second race and paid $6.80. The filly led all the way and was never seriously threatened. Hilton Dabson did the riding. Betrothed saved the place money for backers of the J. W. Y. Martin entry.

A three-way nose finish developed in the third event. Lottery, performing in the colors of George Keeton, was up in the final jump to beat Tedmelia and Steel Knight. The finish was so close that the judges had to consult negatives for both the first and second placings.

Jockey Nick Wall and Trainer P. F. Dwyer scored a double for the program when Dark Phaona won the seventh race, paying $7.30. The Traumer gelding won by three lengths and finished in excellent fashion. Sealoch was second and Busy Fingers was third.

Braving Danger, in the colors of C. F. Heinicke, took the sixth race at a $7.30 mutuel. Moon Harvest was second and Charles F was third. Braving Danger, an 8-year-old son of Crusader, turned on the heat through the stretch and won by two lengths going away. Jockey G. Oros rode the winner.

†J. Tyssowski-Brandon Stable entry.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—HARDY BUD, $13.30, $6.60, $5.30; HASTE BACK, $5.10, $4.00; CHARMFUL, $14.10.
HARDY BUD, off alertly and hustled along in front, kept clear of HASTE BACK and was kept to drive to end. HASTE BACK was hard ridden while closest to pace and held on gamely. CHARMFUL, off slowly, went to contention boldly and went evenly thereafter to show good effort. ALL GRAY was in first flight and weakened in closing test.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:02½. Off 3:02½. Winner, J. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAREFUL DINAH, $6.80, $3.50, $3.40; BETROTHED (entry), $4.60, $3.60; HAPPY LARK, $6.50.
CAREFUL DINAH, first away, withstood early challenge from MANNY B. and drew out to a long lead to win handily. BETROTHED lacked early speed and came gamely in closing test. HAPPY LARK was keen forward factor to midstretch and tired. KANTAN failed to show anything. MANNY B. was off in tangle, moved up boldly to pacemaker and bore out entering stretch.

Daily Double, HARDY BUD and CAREFUL DINAH, Paid $76.70

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:27½. Off 3:27½. Winner, G. Keeton's dk. b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LOTTERY, $24.30, $9.10, $3.70; TEDMELIA, $4.80, $3.10; STEEL KNIGHT, $3.00.
LOTTERY, away in first flight and steadied along to stretch, responded willingly when placed to pressure while on outside and was up in concluding stride. TEDMELIA, slow to begin, saved ground while bettering position and closed gamely on inside. STEEL KNIGHT, probably best, lacked racing room on inside early, went to front boldly approaching far turn, could not draw clear and held on gamely. DOROTHY POMP had speed to set and press early pace and weakened.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,200; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:55½. Off 3:55½. Winner, Millsdale Stable's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MILLFANG, $3.30, $2.40, $2.10; PORT WALES, $4.80, $2.50; RINGIE, $2.30.
MILLFANG, first away and showing excellent speed, withstood challenge of PORT WALES and drew out in stretch under drive. PORT WALES, forwardly placed from beginning, held on stubbornly under strong handling. RINGIE was poorly ridden and closed full of run. SON ALTESSE closed gamely.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:23. Off 4:23½. Winner, A. C. C. Stable's b. g. (8), by New Guinea—mare by Sprig of Mint. Trained by H. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:50⅘.

WINNING MARK	(Dupps)	113	7	7	7	7	7	7	7	12.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HEAD HUNTER, $8.70, $4.60, $3.40; MOLASSES BILL, $8.00, $5.40; SCARLET O, $4.40.
HEAD HUNTER gained forward position early, came around leaders to take command approaching half pole, drew out gradually and won with speed in reserve. MOLASSES BILL was weakly handled and closed ground on own courage. SCARLET O was used up setting pace under hustling tactics and weakened when caught. KNOXVILLE had speed in spots.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, foaled in Maryland. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:52½. Off 4:52½. Winner, C. F. Heinicke's dk. br. h. (8), by Crusader—Dance. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:52⅘.

HEARSAY	(Dupps)	110	1	6	5h	7	7	7	7	30.75

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRAVING DANGER, $7.30, $3.60, $3.00; MOON HARVEST, $2.90, $2.70; CHARLES F., $3.30.
BRAVING DANGER, not hurried in early stages, improved position steadily, rallied gamely under pressure and wore down MOON HARVEST to win in driving finish. MOON HARVEST, rated while racing with CHARLES F., came willingly when put to drive to take command in midstretch, but could not resist winner. CHARLES F., was hard used to take command and opened a good lead, but weakened badly in stretch run. BLACAW could not keep up in early part and made up some ground.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:19½. Off 5:20. Winner, Mrs. A. Pelletteri's b. g. (3), by Traumer—Phaona. Trained by P. F. Dwyer. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:48⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARK PHAONA, $7.30, $3.80, $2.80; SEALOCH, $5.60, $3.80; BUSY FINGERS, $3.00.
DARK PHAONA, rated while close up from start, responded with good energy when placed to drive and was kept to pressure to end while drawing out. SEALOCH, slowest to begin, improved position gradually and closed with good speed. BUSY FINGERS raced CONNAMISTA into defeat to get to front, but weakened in closing test. BEAUTY FLAG lacked early speed, but hung through stretch.

Horses to Watch At Bowie Track

DISTANT STAR—Juvenile with a lot of speed and ready to win at the meeting.

BUBBLEWORTH—Probably a trifle short in that last. Should improve next out.

WALKON—This one will be turned loose before the horses ship to the Graw.

STONE HAVEN—A brisk worker who will do a lot of running in the afternoon.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

If you have wondered why Al Shelhamer is not riding, he was suspended in California and the ruling keeps him grounded until the Havre de Grace meeting. Jockey Ralps Neves received the same at the same time. Both boys are here and rarin' to ride. Jockey Skeets Holland is rather down in the mouth because some chart makers said his mount, Howard, was weakly handled. There was a lot more wrong with the horse than with Holland in my book. Jockey Eddie Decamillis wired that his wife has presented him with a 12-pound son. Ace Hudkins, one of the country's best fighters, has been granted a horse-training license by the Maryland Racing Commission. Hudkins has been working with horses for the past three years and has Broadway Juel. Jockey W. Dufford, under contract to John Bosley, will go to Charles Town after the Maryland meetings. His book is being made by Lefty Wilhelm. Jockey Jimmy Lynch has signed to ride for H. A. Parr 3d. Jockey L. Jankoski, a new comer in this section, swung into action yesterday. Former Jockey Joe Serio, acting for Mrs. Ella K. Bryson, has sold Your Bid to G. R. Watkins at private terms. This is getting to be a neway little column. Art Brown shook off the organ and the microphone and hustled to Bowie for the first time yesterday. They tell me that he took his place in front of the daily double window at 11 o'clock. I invited him to dinner at my house after the races and what do you think the big windbag asked? "What are you having?" Fats Ferneyhough says, "Why, that guy don't have to know what you're having for dinner. He doesn't even have to have an invitation. All he needs is your address." Tell the truth, we had steak, but don't put Art wise. When the tenderloins were brought in, Brown remarked, "Them certainly is big lamb chops." But what can you expect from a guy who has been raised on New England beans without pork. I'll probably hear about that in the morning. Confucius say: Bully Time will be had by all. BILL.

First race—Mama's Boy was well liked by the stables and the clockers in his first start this season and was beaten two lengths by In Memory. He should improve off that race. Murph was right behind the top horse in that heat and figures next in line. Boston Mary dopes best of the others and could win it if fit.

Second race—Interlace, up from New Orleans where he showed creditable performances in allowance events, receives the call over this mediocre field. Millshow also raced well at the Louisiana track but doesn't figure to cope with the top one. Marin might be outclassed but is reported working well.

Third race—Como No was closing strongly on Airflame to lose by a head in their encounter earlier in the week at a distance of 5½ furlongs. Going an additional sixteenth today Como No should be up for the verdict. Clingendaal was no match for the top two in that race, but should beat the others.

Fourth race—Zacharias raced very greenly when beaten a head in fast time in an allowance affair at Santa Anita. A winner in his previous race, he figures much the best of this company. Marion Collins whipped Classic Beauty when they met at Hialeah and they figure next in line in this order.

Fifth race—Aethelwold is the class in the featured Bowie Handicap, having whipped the principal contenders here at Bowie last fall. Conde Rico can be expected to show a better performance over his efforts at sprinting this week. This one raced well over this track last fall. Charlotte Girl is in form despite her last race and can be considered a money factor.

Sixth race—Redbreast displayed good efforts in Florida, competing against better grade platers. His last race, in which he finished third, was run in very fast time. Sirgay won his last race at Santa Anita and shapes up as the chief contender. John Francis is not outmatched and is in form.

Seventh race—Howard was runner-up to The Queen on opening day, and the latter came on to whip Presidential. A similar effort should win today. Dark May has had a conditioner and is due to show distinct improvement. Flushing would become a serious factor if sound.

Best bet—Zacharias.

Tropical Purse To Dinner Jacket

Coral Gables, Fla., April 5 (AP).—Dinner Jacket, a 5-year-old which has been showing improvement, crashed the winner's circle for the first time this winter today in defeating four other platers over 6 furlongs in the Venetian Handicap at Tropical Park.

Favored at $4.10 for $2, the son of Neddie from G. Toothacker's stable, came from off the pace to register with in hand in the good time of 1:12 4-5. Repeller, owned and trained by J. Hazza, was second, and Mrs. L. E. Sober's Radio Gold finished third after setting the early pace.

$5,000 Bowie 'Cap Draws 7 Entries Today

Brann's Aethelwold Given Top Weight for 1st Saturday Feature

A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., April 5.—Upwards of 15,000 turf fans, many getting their first 1940 taste of the sport, are expected to converge on this Prince Georges County track tomorrow afternoon for the first Saturday program on the 38-day spring program in the Free State. In the $5,000 added, The Bowie Handicap, they are likely to find a wide open betting proposition and some interesting competition.

Two Kentucky Derby candidates are among the seven horses named over night for the test over the mile and 70-yards course. Being 3-year-olds meeting older horses, the eligibles for the Churchill Downs classic get into action with feather assignments and will not be neglected in the wagering. In fact, as the race lines up all seven horses will draw support at the mutuel windows.

Weights Frightened

All of the high weights among 22 eligibles for the Bowie Handicap declined the issue, leaving top weight in the field to William L. Brann's Aethelwold, a stablemate of Challedon, making his first start of the year. Aethelwold, scheduled to carry 112 pounds, wintered at Columbia, S. C., under the care of Trainer Lou Schaefer and was shipped to this track a week ago in excellent condition. That the Brann horses are ready was indicated by Pictor's eight-length triumph here last Thursday.

Jockey Nick Wall, who rode Pictor, will have the mount on Aethelwold tomorrow. The Brann campaigner is expected to be favorite in the race by a slight margin.

Trainer Hirsch Jacobs will have a strong hand in the distance battle with a pair of South American importations under the colors of Isadore Bieber. They are Confiado and Conde Rico and they will not lack for backing.

Confiado Is Choice

Those who wager on the entry will put the accent on Confiado. The 7-year-old finished out of the pay circle in the $50,000 Widener, but won his conditioning race before the Hialeah feature.

Kentucky Derby hopefuls to see action are Ella K. Bryson's Clyde Tolson and Mrs. E. G. Lewis' Gen'l Manager. Despite light weight they are likely to have liberal odds attached to them. Gen'l Manager is the colt which ran to the outside fence here last year and was barely beaten.

Post time for the first race is 2:30 p. m. with the daily double on the first and second races.

A. L. Champs Score Over Little Rock

Rolfe, Selkirk Lead 12-Hit Attack; Tigers Win Over Brooklyn As 3 Hurlers Bow

By the Associated Press

Cordele, Ga., April 5.—The New York Giants hammered Don Pulford, Harry Eisenstat and Joe Dobson for 13 hits today to defeat the Cleveland Indians, 15 to 5, in the seventh game of their spring exhibition series. It was the Giants' biggest score of the year.

Johnny McCarthy set the pace, hitting a triple, double and two singles in four times up to drive in five runs, and Al Glossop clouted a homer. Hal Schumacher blanked the Tribe with one hit in the first five innings, then allowed five runs in the next two on five hits, two walks and an error.

YANKS WIN, 11-2

Little Rock, Ark., April 5.—The New York Yankees buried the Little Rock Travelers of the Southern Association under an 11-to-2 score today before 2,800 shivering fans. Lefty Gomez limited the minor leaguers to four hits in the first five innings but was scored upon when Frank Crosetti and Joe DiMaggio both booted the same grounder. Marius Russo finished. Red Rolfe and George Selkirk led the 12-hit attack, the former with a triple, double and single and the latter with a three-bagger and a single.

DODGERS SHELLED

Birmingham, Ala., April 5.—Pounding Fred Fitzsimmons, Wes Ferrell and Newell Kimball for 18 hits, good for 35 total bases, the Detroit Tigers overwhelmed the Brooklyn Dodgers, 15 to 5, today. Lynwood Rowe pitched the full distance for Detroit, giving 11 hits, including homers by former Tiger Roy Cullenbine and Babe Phelps. Rowe also hit a four-bagger for Detroit. Rudy York was the chief Tiger run maker, clouting two home runs, a triple and a single and driving in five runs.

ROSS PACES BEES

Valdosta, Ga., April 5.—Chet Ross' eighth-inning homer provided the tying run, and his single brought in the winning counter today when the Boston Bees regained their winning stride by ekeing out a 10-inning, 6-5 victory over the Knoxville Smokies of the Southern Association.

After being held to three hits and one run for five innings by Bob Carpenter, the Bees uncorked a four-run rally against Ken Sheehan in the eighth. The Smokies belted Starter Joe Sullivan's southpaw offerings hard during his six innings on the mound, making none of the ten hits and all of their runs against him.

Springmen Renew Grid Relations

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., April 5 Gridiron relations with Martinsburg (W. Va.) High School will be resumed in 1940, according to the Berkeley Springs High School football schedule released today by Coach Paul (Moose) Hodges.

The Martinsburg eleven will be met at Martinsburg on October 5.

Hodges is planning an eight-game schedule, opening here on September 27 or 28, against an opponent still to be named and closing with Romney High School here on November 15.

Handley High School of Winchester, Va., opening opponent in past seasons, has not been scheduled for 1940. Martinsburg is the only newcomer to the schedule.

No. 17—Columbia

'The Hardest Hole on the Course'

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Experts Confirm Vote On Columbia's No. 6 As 'All-America' Hole

This is another of a series on the 19 golf clubs in Metropolitan Washington where the professional selects the hardest hole on the course. The twentieth and concluding story will deal with the hardest of the lot, from a consensus of opinion.

Seth Collings, of the Columbia golf shop, drives off the sixth tee with the green and traps in the distance. The gully and hill in the middle of the fairway are not clearly pictured. Woods to the left are out of bounds

For confirmation as to the toughest golf hole at Columbia Country Club, we refer you to the expert opinions of three of the greatest golfers of all time, Ted Ray, Harry Vardon and Charles "Chick" Evans, who each placed No. 6 on the "All-American 18 holes."

Scene of the 1921 National Open championship, many exhibition matches and other tournaments, in addition to the pros, who drop in to pay their respects to Freddie McLeod, the course has been thoroughly tested by the best.

And three that are in golf history as among the smartest and most famous linksmen, remembered the sixth at Columbia when queried on the best 18 holes in the Nation.

A long par four that measures 461 yards, longer than many par fives, the two wood-shot hole is feared even before the golfers leave the first tee. When playing a medal round, the thought is "If I can get past the sixth hole without any trouble I may have a good round." And a very familiar phrase in the locker room at Columbia is "I would have been 70, if I hadn't taken a six on six.

The adjoining picture brings the green closer to the camera than it actually looks from the tee, and hides a big dip and a hill. The latter stops a drive cold and leaves an uphill stance for the second. Seth Collings, veteran of a score of years in the Columbia golf shop, clouts a tee shot that must be straight or real trouble looms. On the left, a 7-foot wire fence at the foot of the trees guards out of bounds from drive to putt. Eight traps dot the fairway, four to catch a drive and as many more to guard the green.

Trust Your Sense

You drive into a hollow from the tee. If you're a long hitter, your ball may climb high enough on the upslope so that you can see the green, or at least high enough to see the bull's-eye marker back of the green. If you're a short hitter, you can see the green from the downslope, but don't expect to get on in two. If you're a middle hitter, you'll just have to trust your sense of direction, and fire away from the hollow.

The terrain slopes uphill to the green, so that your second shot, anything from a long iron to a brassie, must have climbing power. If it climbs to the left or right, traps grab the ball. The hill that leads to the seventh tee leaves just an approach shot back if you go over.

More Trouble

Fred McLeod is in complete agreement with the opinions of his famous friends, Vardon, Evans and Ray, but the Columbia mentor is not sure the sixth hole will always get his vote as toughest on the course. The new second hole, that will require more than a 200-yard carry to reach the fairway, and in addition have the watery ditch at the foot of the green, will be a great golf hole, in the Scot's opinion. It will play as a par 4, and the first hole changed from an extreme dogleg to straightaway.

And if you think the out-of-bounds on the sixth at Columbia is not a real hazard, well perhaps you'd like to know that two or three boys make a a living selling balls back through the fence that reaches the nearby roadway, territory that adds a stroke to your score.

Falmouth Nine Beaten, 11-3, By G. W. High

Murnane and Higgins Hurl Fine Ball to Win Opening Game

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., April 5.—George Washington High School's inexperienced baseball team, built up around only two returning lettermen, displayed planty of promise in its opening game here this afternoon as Falmouth High was drubbed, 11-3. The Presidents drove out ten hits, while two hurlers yielded the visitors but two singles.

Johnny Murnane, veteran right-hander, worked the first five innings and turned in an impressive performance by fanning 12 and giving up one hit. The last two innings of the seven-frame tilt were hurled by Lefty Higgins, a newcomer, who also gave up one hit and struck out two.

Melvin Gallahan, hurling for Falmouth, pitched shutout ball until the fourth inning, when he was nicked for three runs. The Presidents seemed to find the range at that point, and they added two more in the fifth and six runs in the ninth.

Falmouth scored its first run in the second on a hit, an error and a fielders' choice, and added single runs in the fifth and sixth.

Amos Clift, a converted outfielder who held down first base today, led the G. W. attack with three singles in four trips to plate. Murnane added to his pitching feat by clouting a home run and a single in four attempts, while Third Baseman Walter Rumsey contributed a double and a single.

Limerick and Gray accounted for the Indians' only two hits.

Strong Entry Seeks Isemann 'Sweep Honors

A number of strong last-minute entries received yesterday assured one of the best fields ever assembled for the annual George L. Isemann Bowling Sweepstakes tomorrow night at the Mount Rainier and Rosslyn Alleys.

The new star entries for the event which will begin at 1 p. m. at Rosslyn are Ray Florentino, season leading sweepstakes money winner of Baltimore; Earl Campbell, ranking Annapolis pinman; Charlie Bauer, Wendell Miller, Babe Mednick, all of Baltimore, and Al Hosselton, of Richmond. Bauer is a former United States all-events champion.

Other leading bowlers whose entries already were in are Astor Clarke, the Nation's No. 1 bowler in 1939; Ray Barnes, Willie Guerke; Lester Goodson, Dick Thumm, Jimmy Wallace; Hokie Smith, Tony Santini, Ed Blakeney, Eddie Espey and Joe Harrison, the defending champion.

Blakeney and Clarke are other former winners entered.

George Isemann, in whose name the event is staged, will be on hand to present the winner a trophy. In addition there will be cash prizes totaling more than $400.

Durando Cancels Mount At Bowie Due to Illness

Bowie, Md., April 5.—Charlie Durando, apprentice jockey and leading rider to date at the meeting, was forced to cancel his mounts after the fourth race due to illness. He developed a fever and the track physician said he was suffering from tonsilitis. He was advised to enter a Baltimore hospital. Durando is a Brooklyn, N. Y., boy.

La Fond Is Named National College Boxing Official

Sacramento, Calif., April 5 (AP).—Boxing coaches of the National Collegiate Athletic Association today elected Lou Houck, of Penn State, as their president for the ensuing year. Penn State probably will be awarded the 1941 championships.

Houck, vice president last year, succeeded John J. Walsh, of the University of Wisconsin.

Wilson High Scores Over G.U.Prep, 18-10

Winners Collect 12 Hits In Season's Opener At Garrett Park

Wilson High School opened its baseball season with a 18 to 10 victory over Georgetown Prep yesterday on the Garrett Park diamond.

The game was marred with sloppy playing on the part of both teams. The winners connected for a total of 12 hits, including a double by Leftfielder Harry, and a triple by Bart Fugler.

Chuck Devine got 2 of the Prep's 7 hits.

Virginia Golf Team Beats Cornell, 6 to 3

Charlottesville, Va., April 5 (AP).—University of Virginia golfers turned back Cornell, 6 to 3, today to stretch their string of victories to four.

John Battle, Bill Battle, Dixon Brooke and Bobby Franckelton won all points in their individual and foursome matches for Virginia's total.

Wash.-Lee High Defeats Fairfax, 13-3

Butler Is Shelled for 19 Hits in Seven Innings While Losing

Washington-Lee High pounded Pitcher Butler, of Fairfax, for 19 hits in seven innings yesterday to launch its diamond season with a 13-3 victory on the home field.

Doubles by Kirchner, Good and Payne contributed to the winning cause, while Kirchner also drove out a triple to lead the slugging. Shepherd and Tapp, of the home team, each registered three singles in five trips to the plate.

From the opening stanza, when the Little Generals pushed one run across, the defenders were never behind. They added another in the fourth, four more in the fifth, three in the seventh and wound up with four in the eighth. Fairfax's most profitable inning was the seventh, in which a triple by Hollis was the big gun in a two-run spree.

Three W.-L. moundsmen, working in three-inning shifts, limited the opposition to four hits. Roberson and McNab allowed one each, and Bowbeer gave up only two.

Gonzaga Net Team Defeats Western

With victories in the first four singles matches, Gonzaga High opened its tennis season yesterday at the Reno road courts with a 4-to-3 margin over Western.

Emmitt Sheehan, Shortly and Evkert, of the Purple, trounced Smith, Lincoln and Tansey, respectively, in straight sets. Ed Erbin was extended to three sets, 6—4, 6—8 and 6—4, before measuring Western's Gillespie.

The Raiders' first triumph was registered by Donaldson, who defeated Curley, 3—6, 10—8, 6—4. The doubles teams of Smith-Lincoln and Gillespie-Tansey then won their matches easily, but too late to make a difference in the outcome. The first beat Sheehan-Genovese, 8—6, 9—7, and Gillespie-Tansey won over Eckert-Bush, 7—5, 0—6, 6—3.

Bethesda High Golfers Beat Devitt, 9 to 0

Freddy Bolton Paces Mates to Victory in Schoolboy Golf Play

Bouncing back from an opening setback, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High's golfers shut out Devitt Prep yesterday, 9-0, at Congressional as the second round of the annual schoolboy golf series was staged.

Once again it was Freddy Bolten, unbeaten in scholastic competition for the last two years, who paced Bethesda's effort. His 78 was low for the day over a windy course, and his 10 and 8 beating of Devitt's Dan Harlan was as convincing as any turned in.

The defending champions, who lost to Bladensburg in a stinging first-round upset, were never in any sort of trouble yesterday. Besides the most one-sided individual scores, the Bethesdans took the largest best ball count when Shannon and Poerstel defeated Glassman and Strickland, 9 and 8.

The only team to register its second consecutive triumph was Gonzaga, which got off to an early start and edged out Bladenburg, 5-4, at Columbia. Previously the Purple had trampled Blair by a 7-2 count.

The longest match developed at Woodmont, where Blair hung a 7-2 setback on the representatives of St. John's. Clark, playing the No. 1 spot, necessitated 20 holes before he defeated Kelley, 1 up.

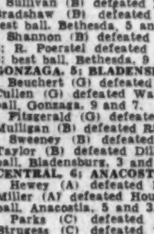
Bill Tilden, at 47, Beats Young Budge, Using Old Tricks

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, April 5 (AP).—William T. Tilden 2d turned back the clock today and scored a surprising upset in the West Coast Professional Tennis Tournament.



TILDEN

The 47-year-old Tilden defeated J. Donald Budge, kingpin of the pro ranks, in straight sets, 7—5, 7—5.

The opening set rocked on, each taking their services, until the twelfth game. Tilden suddenly baffled his younger foe with a cross-court barrage that kept him on the run. He cracked Budge's service.

Monroe Track Team Wins, 57-38

Navy and Dartmouth Nines Clash Today

Annapolis, April 5.—Varsity golf and B squad baseball swing into action at the Navy tomorrow, to top a five-point sport card for the afternoon here. The only travelers will be the dinghy sailors, who, at Cambridge, Mass., will take part in their biggest race of the season, a quadrangular affair, with crews of Harvard, Boston University and Massachusetts Tech as their rivals.

The New England tone of the week will be continued with the Middies opponents in three of the contests of the day, namely, baseball and tennis with Dartmouth, and lacrosse with Harvard.

With both of his upper classmen pitchers, Howie Schoenbaum and Tom Turner, in the scholastic trials for the present, Max Bishop, diamond mentor will put Norman Smith, plebe pitcher of last year on the mound. Smith swirled in most of the games for the unbeaten plebes of last season.

Bishop will also give Capt. Bob Wooding a rest, using Jack Wallace, who did most of the catching for the plebes, on the bag. Other changes will be Murray Thompson for Roy Falconer at third, and Bill Withrow for Ernie Smith at right field.

The Navy lacrosse team made a nice start by defeating Dartmouth, 13 to 3, on Wednesday and anticipates no trouble from Harvard. Penn State will be played next Saturday, and the real test is expected on the 20th, when Princeton, which has been running strong this season, will play at Annapolis.

Other events on the program are golf with Cornell and the initial game for the B squad nine, with Dickey Athletic Club, of Ellicott City, Md.

1 p. m.—Golf, Navy vs. Cornell.
1:45 p. m.—Baseball, Navy vs.
2:30 p. m.—Lacrosse, Navy vs. Harvard. Tennis, Navy vs. Dartmouth.
4 p. m.—Baseball Navy B squad vs. Dickey A. C. of Ellicott City, Md.

Bauer, Cothran Battle Today In Golf Finals

Misses Tainter, Crum Beaten in Semifinals On Charlotte Course

Charlotte, N. C., April 5 (AP).—Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., a veteran of Southern tournaments, and Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., the defending champion, will fight it out tomorrow for the championship of the 1940 Charlotte Country Club Women's Invitation Golf Tournament.

Miss Bauer, the medalist, won her semifinal match today overwhelmingly in eliminating 17-year-old Georgia Tainter, the Fargo (N. D.) sensation, 7 and 5.

Miss Cothran qualified for the finale by defeating a fellow South Carolinian, Jane Crum, South Carolina University student, 4 and 3.

Week's Events Indicate Rise For Business

Corporate Security Issues Gain Sharply From 1939 Levels

Signs of better times ahead developed on several major economic fronts during the week just ending, indicating the probability of sustained business progress.

Corporate security issue offerings to get new capital, a traditional harbinger of activity, increased sharply during the week to $49,315,540 as compared with $32,966,000 during the same week last year.

Poor's Service, analyzing the increased issues, noted that about 47 per cent represented a demand for new money instead of refunding of outstanding issues or obligations.

Approximately $26,000,000 in business stock issues was included in the total, as compared with only $850,000 a year ago. Public utilities, which last year offered $24,000,000 during the week, presented $5,000,000 this past week, indicating a slackening of big-industry offerings and an increase in issues by a number of diversified smaller industries.

Building Awards Up

Another token was the weekly construction awards total, which showed an increase of approximately 60 per cent in private awards to $32,512,000 the Engineering News-Record reported.

Conditions in the automobile industry were looking up as advances were recorded in domestic and export sales by all companies reporting. The Ford Motor Co. reported March retail sales totaled 92,227 units, an increase of 58 per cent over February. Other companies had previously noted substantial increases.

An estimate that automobile production in 1940 may reach 4,000,000 units was released by the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Production in 1939 aggregated 3,577,000 cars. Production reports for the first three months in 1940 are considerably above the same period last year.

Retail Car Sales Boom

Retail sales activity reminiscent of the boom periods of 1929 and 1937 are reflected in reports from the leading car and truck manufacturers covering the first quarter of the current year.

Leading in sales activity is Chevrolet. It reported retail deliveries of new cars and trucks during the first quarter of 1940 totaled 254,751 units, compared with 191,607 a year ago. March sales were 108,014, a 41.1 per cent increase over February.

Buick division of General Motors reported its retail deliveries of new units for the year's first quarter totaled 61,625, compared with 46,753 in the same period a year ago. Pontiac's retail sales report for the three months ending March 31 totaled 50,041, compared with 34,113 in 1939.

R. L. Polk & Co., reporting on a complete tabulation of new car registration in all States, said it shows new car and truck sales to consumers during January and February of this year totaled 571,827, against 439,971 in the same period a year ago.

Earnings Increase Is Shown

The Gulf Oil Co. announced a $5,000,000 expansion program, while the General Electric Co. reported orders for the first quarter totaled $97,490,047, an increase of 12 per cent.

Earning reports of virtually all the large and small corporations noted much heavier volume in 1939 than in 1938, with production operations expanding steadily in the first quarter of 1940 as contrasted to the same period in 1939 and the last quarter of that year.

The Alexander Hamilton Institute, reviewing the rise in operating revenues and increased car loadings, said of the railroads' outlook: "It is possible that operating revenues this year will be larger than in any preceding year since 1930. This means another profitable year for the railroads, but profits will still be unsatisfactory from the standpoint of predepression levels."

PCA Announces $141,333 Profits Earned in 1939

Pittsburgh, April 5.—After making provision of $165,166.98 for depreciation and amortization, Pennsylvania-Central Airlines earned an operating profit of $141,333.02 in 1939, according to the airline's annual financial statement made public today by C. Bedell Monro, president. This earning is compared with an operating loss of $18,391.54 in 1938. Net income for the year was $53,318.47 as compared with a net loss of $20,867.81.

Passenger revenue totaled $1,262,453, a 35 per cent increase over the $935,492 recorded during 1938. Revenue from the carriage of mail amounted to $535,105, a 12½ per cent increase. Passenger traffic increased 43 per cent in 1939, with 122,303 passengers being carried as compared with 85,484.

Air express revenue mounted to $42,299 during 1939, a 58½ per cent increase. The total revenue airplane miles flown were 3,463,606, a gain of 21.8 per cent.

During the year the company applied to the Civil Aeronautics Authority for permission to operate additional routes totaling 2,144 route miles, including a route from Norfolk, Va., to Cincinnati.

Movement Irregular on Consolidation Of Position Brought by Mid-Week Rise; List Closes Off .06 Point on Average

New York, April 5.—After its action Thursday in breaking through to a new high for the move, the stock market set about consolidating its position today. Price movements were generally irregular and the market closed on a net loss of 0.06 point.

The volume of business quieted down on the easier tone, which was pleasing to the bullish forces. A total of 1,255,440 shares changed hands, well under Thursday's total of nearly 2,000,000.

Speculative issues, which were most prominent on the upside in the mid-week rally, reflected profit taking operations. There was sufficient buying to carry 88 individual stocks to new highs for the year.

Profit Taking in Aviation

Aviations held a good share of the attention but after a period of strength they were subjected to profit taking. Lockheed was the big board's most active stock and made a new high but ended the session down ⅝ point. Boeing and Aviation Corporation closed with plus signs but the majority in this division lost moderately. Steels also enjoyed a period of strength but lost their progress before the close.

Beverage and food stocks were trotted out by the bullish forces when the volatile aviations displayed signs of faltering. Loft closed with a fractional gain and there was heavy trading in Standard Brands, also up fractionally.

Wall Street regards the growth of anti-third term sentiment, as reflected in the Wisconsin primaries, as an important bullish factor. A partner of one of the leading wire houses, in describing Thursday's market, described the action as "the New Deal obsequies."

The attitude in the street is that if the New Deal is dead, there will again be an opportunity for those who save their money to make profitable investments.

Listed Bonds

Listed bonds lost a little of their strength today, but still were in modest demand. Speculative issues in general were a little higher, and any small losses in that section were due mainly to week-end realizing. Foreign dollar securities showed good results, Australians leading the way, trading amounted to $9,470,000.

The low priced railroad issues again were most active, with interest-payers and default bonds alike in demand.

Australian municipals did well in the foreign department. Canadians likewise improved. Scandinavian and Belgian obligations did well, but Italians receded.

United States Treasury bonds held to former levels, as the buying enthusiasm was dampened by the drop in the Federal Reserve open market portfolio.

Orval Adams Attacks U. S. Spending Rise

'All Out of Control,' Mormon Banker Tells Conference

Pullman, Wash., April 5.—Control of Federal spending and halting the threat of Treasury breakdown and dictatorship following an uncontrolled rise in public debt was urged here today to the fourth annual Northwest Conference on Banking at the State College of Washington by Orval W. Adams, of Salt Lake City, past president of the American Bankers Association.

"There is ample evidence," Adams told the 400 bank executives gathered here this week to study banking trends, "that public spending, with all its evil portents is out of control."

Adams is executive vice president of the Utah State National Bank of Salt Lake City, leading Mormon Church financial institution. He spoke on "Solvency or Shackles." Attacking the "economy reform" by which the Director of the Budget has been transformed from an independent bureau responsible to only Congress, and thus a "strategic key to Government solvency," to a "glorified bookkeeper, under the domination and, subject to the will of the Executive—a helpless substitute," Adams said.

"This was perpetrated on us largely because we showed ourselves to be economic illiterates. We imagined that history began with us. We are Little Red Riding Hoods, bringing our hard-earned substance to our dear Government Grandma, who turns out to be a hungry wolf that devours not only our substance, but threatens our lives and fortunes.

"It is the teaching of all history that whenever the life blood of the people is sucked to maintain men in power, to sustain a top-heavy government, no matter what name it bears, the day of reckoning is at hand."

Buying of Mills Steadies Cotton, Small Gain Made

New York, April 5 (AP).—Buying by mill accounts put the cotton futures market on its feet today. The list showed little inclination to stray, however, and final prices were up only 1 to 2 points.

Highlight of dealings was the active bidding for the July delivery by brokers with both domestic and foreign mill connections.

Heavy overnight rains in parts of the Central and Eastern belt caused concern among some observers, who saw the possibility of delay in planting and new crop preparation.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures shuffled indecisively today until the last hour when May liquidation and scattered selling increased. Final prices were unchanged to to 5 points lower.

Reports Belgium had asked for sizable quantities of U. S. yard influenced buying at the start.

Sales totaled 98 contracts: May, 6.59 bid; July, 6.66 bid; September, 6.71; October, 6.69.

Crude oil held an advance of ⅛ cent a pound as sales and bids were reported from the Southeast and valley at 5¾ cents and in Texas at 5¾.

2 Railroads Plan Security Issues

The New York Central Railroad applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday for authority to issue $16,000,000 of promissory notes.

It has $20,000,000 of 4 per cent notes maturing on April 30. It proposes to pay 20 per cent of this amount in cash and give new notes for the unpaid balance.

July Wheat Nears '39 Top; Rises to 1.05¾

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 5.—July wheat contracts, representing the new 1940 crop, advanced as much as 1⅝ cents at one stage today to 1.05¾, biggest since last December and within 2 cents of the season's peek established then.

Buying inspired by continued dry weather in the Southwest, where the surplus hard winter wheat crop is produced, caused the upturn. September contracts rose 1½ to 1.05⅝, within ⅛ of the season's high, while May, an old crop delivery, advanced a cent to 1.06½.

Despite heavy profit taking and some hedging of loan wheat, which reduced extreme gains at times, wheat closed ½-1⅛ higher than yesterday, May, 1.06⅛@1.06; July, 1.05⅜@1.05¼; September, 1.05@1.04⅞. Corn was ⅜-⅝ up; May, 57¾@57½; July, 58½. Oats, ⅛-½ higher. Rye, ⅞-1⅛ up, and lard unchanged to 3 lower.

Gifts of Stock Exceed Million

The Securities Commission disclosed yesterday two gifts of stock each involving more than $1,250,000 in February and the sale by General Motors Corporation of about $2,500,000 of Bendix Aviation Corporation common stock.

The gifts were 15,000 shares of William Wrigley, jr., common by Ada E. Wrigley, of Chicago, and 14,500 shares of Inland Steel common by G. Herbert Jones, of Chicago. The Wrigley stock has been selling at about $90 a share, making that gift worth about $1,350,000. At present prices about $89, the Inland gift would be worth about $1,260,000.

United Power To Reorganize Capital Plan

Company to Seek Lower Financing Cost, Woolfolk Says

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 5.—William G. Woolfolk, president of the United Light & Power Co., an important Midwestern utility holding company, said in its annual report today that a drastic plan of recapitalization of the company will be submitted to the Securities and Exchange Commission at an early date.

The plan will have as its objective the establishment of "so sound a capital structure that a strong credit rating will be insured that future financing be done at the lowest money rates and that a continuity of earnings and dividends be maintained."

The report of the company and subsidiaries for 1939 showed net income of $4,598,654, equal after annual dividend requirements on the $6 cumulative first preferred stock, to 29 cents a share on the combined class "A" and "B" common stocks. This compares with net income in 1938 of $3,091,506, equal to $5.15 a share on the $6 preferred.

Standard of California

Standard Oil Co. of California reported consolidated net profit for 1939 of $17,822,505, or $1.36 a share, compared with $28,875,653, or $2.20 a share, in 1938.

W. H. Berg, president, announced the company made settlement of $7,138,297 with the United States Government as of March 27 in connection with the Elk Hills oil case. The settlement included interest and relinquished properties carried in the company accounts at approximately $4,500,000.

Consolidated Oil

Consolidated Oil Corporation and subsidiaries reported today net income for 1939 of $7,540,880, or 55 cents a common share, the same share earning as in 1938, when net income was $7,737,712.

Dixie-Vortex Co.

Chicago, April 5 (AP).—Directors of Dixie-Vortex Co. today declared an interim dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock, payable May 15 to stock of record April 25. Directors also declared the regular quarterly of 62½ cents a share on the class A stock, payable July 1 to stock of record June 10.

Steel Production Rivals 1929, 1937

New York, April 5 (AP).—Production of 14,230,373 net tons of open hearth and Bessemer steel ingots in the first three months of this year gave 1940 the third best first-quarter record in history, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today.

The total, representing an average operating rate of 72.12 per cent of capacity, was exceeded only in the first quarters of 1929 and 1937. The industry operated at an average of 63 per cent of capacity last month, compared with 56.3 per cent in March, 1939.

$100,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gave notice yesterday that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 91-day bills, and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders. Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or the branches thereof, up to 2 p. m. Monday. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

Walker Is Elected

Pittsburgh, April 5 (AP).—The National Supply Co., dealing in pipe and oil well supplies, announced today election of A. E. Walker, veteran steel executive, as president. He was connected with Republic Steel Corporation 21 years and later was president of Truscon Steel Co. and executive vice president of the Pittsburgh Steel Co.

Terp, G. W. Nines Busy Today

Double Bill Is Carded at College Park

Maryland Lacrosse Team Plays Loyola; Nine Meets Pitt; G. W. vs. Vermont

Maryland will be favored to score a double victory at 2:30 this afternoon at College Park when its baseball and lacrosse teams meet Pittsburgh and Loyola, of Baltimore, respectively, in a concurrent twin bill.

Meanwhile at the same hour over on the East Ellipse George Washington's nine will play host to Vermont in its second game of the season.

Only other activity to claim local college athletes over the week-end is scheduled at Blacksburg, where the Maryland trackmen will make their outdoor debut against V. P. I. The Terps will be without Joe Murphy, Southern Conference 100 and 220 champion, who is recovering from an illness. In Murphy's absence, Maryland will count heavily on Kenneth Barnes who has been showing improvement at the sprint distances.

Sophomores on Mound

The Terrapin nine, seeking its third consecutive victory after successive defeats by Duke and Virginia, will entrust its pitching to a pair of sophomores making their maiden varsity starts. Leon Vannais, a lefthander, and Max Hunt, a righthander, are the pair who will receive their hurling baptism. The Terps, though their infield is shaky, have been slugging hard recently and must be given a decided edge over the Panthers, who were trounced, 19-5, by Virginia.

In lacrosse, Maryland will be after its third triumph in a row and its third of the week. Having drubbed Dartmouth and Harvard, Jack Faber's stickmen appear too strong for Loyola. The Terps are slowly but surely approaching the form that won them the 1939 national intercollegiate championship.

A star of the Loyola ten is Herbert O'Connor, jr., son of the Maryland Governor.

Frank McGinnis, a big righthander from Western High School, is scheduled to pitch for George Washington as the Colonials strive to atone for their dismal opening defeat by Dartmouth. McGinnis worked two creditable innings against Dartmouth Thursday, and Coach Ed Morris believes he rates an opening assignment. The catching berth is still wide open but aside from that position Morris will stand pat on the lineup that faced the Indians.

Need Experience

"Of course we looked ragged," Morris said after his team lost to Dartmouth, 8-2, but at that I was encouraged with the team's showing. We need a few games to iron out the rough spots but in ten days I expect a decided improvement.

Toby Bright, a southpaw from Western, and Joe Comer, an orthodox hurler from Roosevelt, will be held in reserve to McGinnis. Morris also called on Leaton Kushman, another left-hander who has shown to advantage in relief roles. Kushman pitched to only two batters in theopening game.

Candidates for the unsettled catching assignment are Lud Urick, Wes Taylor, Paul Brieff and Bob Nowaskey. Urick and Taylor worked against Dartmouth, but netither was impressive.

Vermont holds a 16-1 decision this season over William and Mary.

Virginia Track Teams Face V. M. I. Today

Cavalier Varsity, Frosh Squads Boast Numerous Cinder Stars

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., April 5.—Varsity and freshman track teams of the University of Virginia will feature the week-end sports program here by matching strides with V. M. I. squads, starting at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Coach Archie Hahn will be able to assign lettermen to nearly every varsity event, and will present several freshman standouts for the opening of the dual meet season.

Dayton in Sprints

Chief variety entry for the sprints is Don Dayton, a two-year veteran. John Cronley, promising sophomore quarter-miler from Richmond, will work with Dick Scott and Jack Fritsche, of last year's varsity runners.

Starters in the distance runs will include McChesney Goodall and Curtis Hannum, of previous varsity experience, and Beverley Tucker, who is regarded as the class of the milers as a sophomore.

A concentration of points in the hurdles looms for Capt. Frank Fuller and Armistead Peyton, seniors, who will be accompanied by Bill Marbury, Norman Rathbun and Robert Jacobs, sophomores.

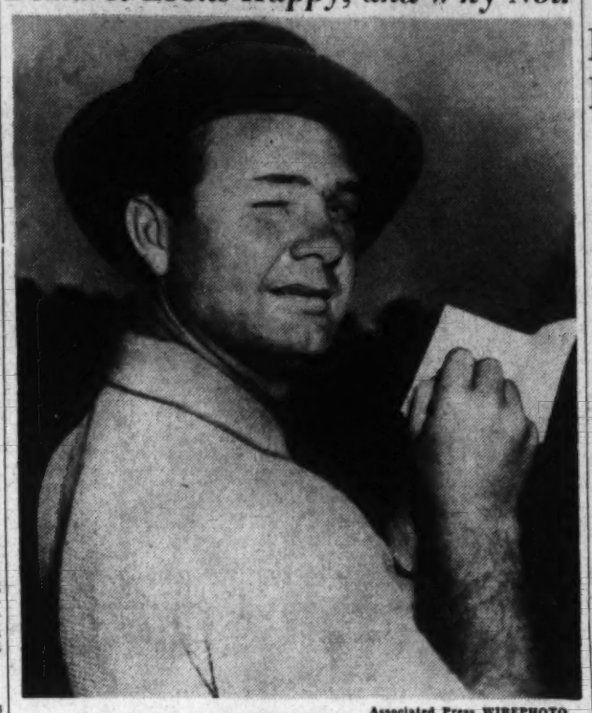
Old hands for the field events are Lee McLaughlin, shot and discus; Bill Perry, high jump; Ed Lowrance, broad jump; Bobby Preston, pole vault, and Walter Jones and Tom Yancey, javelin.

The Cavalier freshmen have a great prospect for the hurdles in Tom Todd, Episcopal High School's State prep champion of last year, as well as Ned Campbell, former Woodberry Forest sprint champion, and Billy Suhling, star high jumper and pole vaulter from Episcopal High.

Y Stages Volley Ball Tournament Today

The ninth annual Cherry Blossom volley ball tournament of the local Y. M. C. A. will be staged here today, with entries from York, Pa., Richmond, Philadelphia, Greensboro, N. C.; Camden, N. J., and Baltimore in competition with the D. C. contingent. First match is set for 1 p. m.

Demaret Looks Happy, and Why Not?



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

You'd smile, too, if like Jimmy Demaret you had just chalked up a par 72 to tie Lloyd Mangrum for the lead in the Masters' Golf Tournament. Demaret's round added to his brilliant 67 of Thursday gave him a 36-hole total of 139 condition even to practice on the putting green, Jones tried to carry on. The pain became so intense during today's round that he reluctantly announced he would forego the final 36 holes.

Bracketed at 143, and still very much in the chase, were Sammy Snead, the slammin' hillbilly, and William Goggin, whose game was helped, rather than hurt, by the hit on the head e got during a practice round. Eac had a 72 today.

A stroke away were Harry Cooper and Jug McSpaden. The 145 group included Dick Metz, Paul Runyan, Wilford Wehrle, Al Watrous, who today fired a 70, Ed Dudley Gene Sarazen, Tommy Armour and Craig Wood.

The Haig Hits Trouble

Perhaps the most unfortunate round of the day was played by Walter Hagen. The Haig had 1g pars, but a 6 on the first hole and an 8 on the treacherous thirteenth cost him a 78.

Benny Hogan, winner of three successive tournaments before the masters' and one of the pre-tourney favorites, continued to have his troubles and had a 74 for a total of 147. With him in that bracket was Lawson Little, who today slipped to a miserable 77, and the once invincible Ralph Guldahl.

The biggest disappointments of the second round were Clayton Heafner and Billie Burke. Heafner soared to 82 for a halfway total of 1gg and Billie Burke, who was among the first-round leaders with a 72, had an 81.

Toronto Leafs Nine to Have But 3 Veterans

Tony Lazzeri Brings Out Fledgling Team April 18 in Newark

(This is another of a series written for the Associated Press on the prospects of International League clubs.)

By GORD WALKER
Toronto Globe And Mail

Toronto, April 5.—When the Toronto Maple Leafs open the International League baseball season at Newark April 18, Tony Lazzeri will place on the field a starting team which will include no more than three members of the 1939 Toronto lineup.

Lazerri took over the managerial reins from Jack Burns last mid-season, and wound up a tail-ender. The Leafs were too far behind when the former Yankee great stepped into Toronto, but he did make them play a smarter, crowd-pleasing brand of ball than had characterized their earlier performance.

Power and hustle were two requisites in which the Maple Leafs were sadly lacking when the change in pilots was effected. And right then and there Lazzeri determined to have a team this year which, if nothing else, would not fall short in these qualities.

There never was a great deal wrong with the pitching department of a team which was forced to concede about 50 games by shutouts and one-run margins. One more power hitter in the lineup would have meant a huge difference in those close games.

From last year's mound staff, Billy Weir was recalled by the Boston Bees and Joe Mulligan was shunted out to the Coast League. The only pitching newcomer of account is Jim Reninger, formerly with Baltimore. Reninger, apparently fully recovered from an arm ailment which hindered his play in 1939, has earned a position as starter along with Jim Walkup, Earl Calowell, Carl Fischer, Johnny Pezzullo and Phil Marchildon, a brilliant, rookie from Penetang, Ontario.

John Berly, leader in earned run averages last season rates as the best relief pitcher in the league. Ralph Hammond, a southpaw plucked from the Guelph, Ontario, sandlots, has shown enough to indicate he might stick.

Improvement has been made in the catching department. Tommy Heath, a capable defensive p mer but weak hitter, will b it out for the first-string job with Milton Gray, drafted from Williamsport. Frankie Reiber, out with injuries most of last year, was placed on the trading block after a lengthy holdout siege.

The Toronto infield will not take definite shape until the second week in April when the Philadelphia Athletics are scheduled to deliver a pair of high-class performers. Harley Boss, first baseman obtained in a straight trade with San Francisco for Jack Burns, is the only certain infield starter.

Bogskar Wins Rich Aintree Steeplechase

856 yards. Ahead, running wild, was John Hay Whitney's National Night, who after tossing his rider at the twelfth jump, kept on to complete the second circuit ahead of the winner.

Mrs. Louis E. Stoddard's Milano, the only other American entry, survived the first circuit, but was out of it by the time the field reached the canal turn for the second time.

As Bogskar pulled away from MacMoffat after clearing the last fence in front, Royal Danieli, cofavorite with Kilstar, lay at the second jump from home. He struggled to get up as the field thundered by, despite a snapped shoulder tendon, but fell back and finally was carted from the course. He is expected to race again, however.

Royal Danieli and MacMoffat swapped the lead on the first round. The Professor II, another favorite, was up close but Bogskar was back with the "common people" with Jones biding his time. Kilstar, after faltering early in the race, was moving up to fifth.

One by one the course and racing luck killed them off. Milano blundered at the second jump of the second circuit. Kilstar and The Professor faded. But MacMoffat and Royal Danieli still were on top going serenely as they swung past the canal turn and into the last gruelling mile.

It's All Bogskar

Royal Danieli went down. MacMoffat went on stolidly but by this time the two outsiders, Gold Arrow and Bogskar were in the picture. The three took the final fence with not more than a length separating them. But when it came to the final run on the flat, it was all Bogskar.

For all of the triumph on the course, there was more to the race than the running. A typical English crowd seemed bent on showing "things as they are" despite the war.

English peers, beautifully dressed, bet two shillings. Irish farmers in tweeds bet greasy rolls of banknotes. Pretty ladies from Mayfair and the hunting country eyed each other more than they eyed the horses.

Navy and army airforce officers looked over the winner and what they hoped would be the winner in the paddock. Privates in uniform munched sausages and rolls, and drank incredibly bad beer on the backstretch. It was the Grand National all right despite the obvious air-raid precautions and other signs of war.

Sacred Heart Bows

Saint Thomas baseballers defeated the Sacred Heart nine, 9 to 5, yesterday. Each team collected six hist. Badly strared for the winners, and Sweeney for the losers.

as Powers relieved Dieckelman who moved back into rightfield and then the Hoyas went to work.

Dartmouth picked up its initial runs quickly and simply. Dick Burns got life at first when Lou Ghecas threw wildly off his grounder to third and then big Jack Orr drove a towering home run over the leftfield embankment.

Georgetown came back with a run in its half of the frame on a single by Schmitt and a pair of infield outs, and tied the score in the third as Schmitt again crossed the plate after leading off the inning with a single. The Indians took what was to be their last lead in the fourth when they fashioned an unearned run from a base on balls and an error.

Postscripts . . .

Atlanta, Ga., April 5.—For the special benefit of Bucky Harris, the Atlanta club will pitch Larry Miller, a big right-hander, against the Nats here Sunday . . . Miller, 24 year old, 6-feet 4-inches tall, won ten games and lost five for Atlanta last year and the Nats are interested in a deal for him . . . As a crowd-drawing move, Harris on Sunday will send Dutch Leonard, former Atlanta ace, to the mound . . . Atlanta believes it has a "find" in 19-year-old Connie Ryan, a second baseman freshman off Louisiana State campus . . . Two well-socked two-baggers in his first two appearances today did nothing to disturb that notion . . . Atlanta's favorite big leaguer is Cecil Travis who lives in Riverdale, only 21 miles distant . . . Travis' farm there is one of the show-places of the section . . . he stocked it with quail two years ago and is permitting no hunting for three years . . . Rookie Al Evans received a dirty look from Rick Ferrell today when he broke Ferrell's favorite bat in hitting practice . . . as a rookie, Evans is not entitled to order any special bats of his own and must use any weapon he finds laying around . . . the regulars are permitted to order bats in lots of a half-dozen at most as often as they please . . . If the Yankees ask waivers on Tommy Reis, who was knocked out of the box yesterday by a minor league club, the Nats will claim him. Harris indicates . . . Washington is carrying only 11 pitchers at this writing and would be willing to part with four of them—Alex Carrasquel, Bucky Jacobs, Gilberto Torres and Rene Monteagudo . . . If George Case hits .300 for the third consecutive year he will do it despite what seemingly is one of the worst batting streaks in the big league . . . Case's power is to left-field, but he stands in the box as if deliberately attempting to hit to right . . . Gerald Walker gave Bucky Harris a pleasing sample of his ground-covering ability today when he galloped to deep left center and made a one-hand catch of Parker's tremendous drive.—POVICH.

Contract Bridge

Some bright young bridge player decided to "psyche" against M. D. Maier and Charles Lochridge, experts who recently won the Goldman pair championship. The unhappy result is shown in today's box. The psychic bidder with his partner was quickly pinioned by his own arrow—and trapped at three diamonds, doubled, for a set of two tricks.

Maier and Lochridge could make about one spade on their cards, as East held most of the missing strength.

East doubled two spades, but West, frightened by his own false opening, fled to three diamonds, which the experts lost no time in doubling.

The play was rather pitiful to behold, as East, saddled with all the power and most of the leads, had to destroy his own hand by continually leading from it.

Lochridge opened with the seven of diamonds. He and Maier eventually won three spades, one diamond and two clubs, or six tricks. Declarer made three diamonds, a spade ruff, two hearts and a club.

Tech Track Team Meets Terps on Home Oval; Diamonders Busy

Special Dispatch to The Post

Blacksburg, Va., April 5.—Virginia Tech's varsity nine will begin its 14-game campaign tomorrow at Hampden-Sydney, while the first-year trackmen are opening in Miles Stadium here against Greenbrier Military School and the varsity track team is engaging Maryland in its first conference test at home also.

Against the Tigers and in games at William and Mary on Monday and at University of Richmond on Tuesday the Techmen will send a potentially capable infield, an outfield trio composed of former infielders, a veteran backstop and a quintet of hurlers who look promising but quite unpredictable.

Four of the hurlers are veterans: Gurley Barlow, George Warriner, Karlton Owen and Nelson Beville. Owen is the only portsider in the foursome. Billy Jones, who is the only sophomore in the first array of slabmen, may get the starting assignment against Hampden-Sydney. George (Buckeye) Warriner, big junior from Richmond, will probably get the call in the William and Mary game, with Owen slated to face the Spiders the following day. If Warriner proves as effective in baseball as he was against William and Mary on the gridiron, the Indians will be hard pressed.

The Tech trackmen outscored Emory and Henry handily last week in their first meet, but possess no outstanding performers and therefore will hardly be a match for University of Maryland's great array of runners. Tech has no boys this year to match strides with Alan Miller, Jim Kehoe, Mason Chronister, Tom Fields, Gene Ochsenreiter and other Terp stars.

The freshmen, with Paul McMullin, Ambler Brown, Jimmy Banks and Don Stewart showing some promise, are expected to give a strong Greenbrier team a close meet. The meets begin at 1:30.

Bob Dunkelberger Beaten by Dunlap

Pinehurst, N. C., April 5. (AP).—George T. Dunlap, jr., former national amateur champion, defeated Bobby Dunkelberger, southern champion from High Point, N. C., at the 20th hole today in a semi-final match of the North and South amateur golf tournament.

In tomorrow's championship round Dunlap, five times winner of the North-South, will play John B. Ryerson, veteran of Cooperstown, N. Y., who eliminated Skip Alexander of Durham, N. C., 2 up.

Richmond Beats Vermont, 14 to 4

Richmond, Va., April 5 (AP).—Richmond University's undefeated Spiders clubbed out a 14-to-4 victory over the University of Vermont baseball team on Millhiser Field today.

They had to come from behind with a four-run rally in the sixth, and the Richmond power broke loose again with six more runs in the seventh.

Listen!
with Slocum

For 90 minutes on several days each week, Reese Taylor is probably the busiest man in radio.

At 12:30 p. m. E. S. T., he takes his place at the microphone for the romantic duties of "Drew Sinclair" in "The Romance of Helen Trent" at Columbia's Chicago studios. At 12:45 p. m., he makes a dash for a studio across the hall, gets in on the last minutes of a "Right to Happiness" rehearsal, and at 1:30 he becomes "Bill Walker" in that serial.

At 1:45 page boys, receptionists, and fellow actors hold their breath and plaster themselves against the walls while Taylor flashes back to the studio he started out in—where at 1:46 p. m. he goes back on the air as "Dr. Parsons" in C. B. S.'s "Road of Life."

Reese, who has a rugged constitution to start with, seems to be flourishing on his hair-raising routine—it is his companions who are on the verge of nervous breakdowns.

Reese sprints from one show to another on days when he's in all three, changing from "Drew Sinclair" to "Bill Walker" to "Dr. Parsons" with apparent ease while other cast members stand around biting fingernails, tearing hair, and fighting off jitters as they wait for Taylor to get some place or arrive from some place.

"I've developed a cast-iron nervous system," says Reese. "It would take an earthquake, a flood, and a date with Hedy LaMarr to get me excited."

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

At last Wolfe seemed to have the case ready for rapid developments. He agreed to give Inspector Cramer the murderer and the motive, if in turn he could direct the procedure in his own way. Neya Tormic, his client, was present. Carla Louchen was hidden upstairs. Wolfe had received a package from Seven Seas Radio. Inspector Cramer was waiting, dubious, but forced to trust Wolfe. And Wolfe ordered Archie Goodwin to get John Barrett on the telephone, whereupon he advised Barrett that he was proceeding, and Barrett said he was coming over and bringing his son, Donald.

Chapter 33

HE PUSHED the phone away and got to his feet, and moved in the direction of the door.

Neya Tormic jumped up and grabbed at him. She got his sleeve. "Where—I'll go with you——"

"No, Miss Tormic. I'll be back in a moment. Archie!"

I rose and started over, but before I got there she let him go, and he went on out. I had no idea what her status was, or her intentions either, so I ambled to the door and stood there with my back against it. She didn't go back and sit down, but stood pat, with her eyes leveled at me, or maybe at the door since I don't like to flatter myself. We had held the tableau perhaps three minutes, not more than four, when I felt the door pressing against me and stood aside to let Wolfe reenter. He halted to hand me an envelope sealed, with "For Neya Tormic" on it in his writing, and then went on to his desk.

He looked at Cramer and indicated with a thumb the dick in the corner. "What is that man's name?"

"That? Charlie Heath."

Cramer twisted his neck. "Here, Heath. Follow orders."

"Thank you." Wolfe regarded the dick, approaching. "Have you a car, Mr. Heath?"

"Yes, sir."

"Good. Take that envelope from Mr. Goodwin and put it in your pocket. No, your inside pocket. Take Miss Tormic in your car and drive——"

Neya was at him: "No! I don't—I'm not going——"

"That will do." Wolfe snapped. "You are going. I do this my way. Have you any cash with you?"

"But I won't——"

"You will! Confound it, how much cash have you?"

"I . . . have a little."

"How much?"

"A few dollars."

"Archie, give Miss Tormic $100."

I produced the expense roll and peeled it off, making the roll look pretty sick, and handed it to her and she took it.

Wolfe said to the dick, "Drive to the corner of Fifth avenue and Thirty-fifth street, let Miss Tormic out, give her the envelope, leave her there, and return straight here immediately. You are not to loiter to see what she does or which way she goes. Nor are you to communicate in any way with any other person, either going or returning."

I said grimly, "Send Fred along or let me go."

"Will that be necessary, Mr. Cramer?"

"No, I'm not a complete fool. Follow instructions, Heath."

"YES, SIR. I take her to Fifth, drop her, give her the envelope, and come straight back."

Wolfe nodded. "Will you do that?"

"Yes, sir."

"Good." He turned. "Au revoir, Miss Tormic."

"Ah," she said. Her black eyes were piercing him. "You think so?"

"Well . . . a conjecture. It wouldn't surprise me any."

"You . . . you fat fool!"

"Yes, I'm fat. And, of course, we're all fools. I'm sorry you won't be here to see the end of this. A silly little victory, but it's mine."

"Victory!"

"Yes."

Her lip curled. She turned and started off. I got to the door and opened it, but before she passed through she halted to fling back at him, "Teega mee borine roosa," or at least that was what it sounded like. Then she went on, don't-touch-me all over, with the dick at her heels. I let them out, followed them into the November night air, and stood on the stoop to overlook the departure. As well as I could see in the dim light, the dick didn't pass any signal to any colleague, and when they rolled off in the police car they certainly weren't followed.

I stayed on the stoop long enough to be absolutely sure of that, knowing as I did the lengths a cop will sometimes go to on account of his passion for law and order, and was about to check it off and go back in when a big black town car rolled to the curb there below me. A chauffeur jumped out and opened the door, and touched his cap when one of the two men who emerged said something to him. They started up the steps, and I recrossed the threshold and turned to welcome two generations of Barretts. I asked them to wait there a minute and went to the office and told Wolfe:

"Father and son."

"Bring them in."

I did that. John P., who hadn't changed his clothes, took the chair Neya had occupied. His face was all tightened up, and the glance that he shot first at Cramer and then at Wolfe was not what I would call conciliatory. I moved up another chair for Donald. He looked so fierce and truculent that I had a notion to go get him a hunk of raw meat. Nobody had seemed to have any inclination to shake hands like gentlemen.

Wolfe said, "Fred, wait in front."

Fred went.

"Archie, take your notebook."

I took it.

JOHN P. asked, "Are you Police Inspector Cramer?"

"Yes, sir," Cramer told him. "Of the homicide bureau."

John P. said to Wolfe, "That's ridiculous. This is a confidential business matter. And telling your man to take his notebook."

Wolfe leaned back and pressed his five right finger tips against his five left ones. "No," he said, "I wouldn't call it ridiculous, Mr. Cramer's presence is surely appropriate, since one of the things you'll want to do is to try to arrange it so that your son will escape an indictment for first-degree murder."

Cramer's head jerked around. Donald gawked, and some of the color leaving his face made him look a little less fierce. John P. betrayed no sign whatever of having heard anything more provocative than a remark about the weather. But he clipped off words and lunged with them:

"That's worse than ridiculous. And more dangerous. That's actionable."

"So it is." Wolfe's tone sharpened. "I'm coming right out with it, Mr. Barrett. My dinner's in an hour, and I don't want to waste time flopping around in a mire of inanities. I hold the cards and I don't have to finesse. Your deal with the Donevitch gang is done for. Accept that. Swallow it. I want to go on from that—"

"I'd like to see you alone." John P. stood up. "Get them out of here or take me—"

"No. Sit down."

"Sit down for what? You say the deal's done for. Whether it is or isn't, I'm not talking on that basis. There's nothing to talk about. Come, Donald."

He started off. Wolfe's words hit him in the back:

"Within an hour a warrant will issue charging your son with murder! It will be too late to talk to me then!"

Donald was up and following his leader. But his leader suddenly wheeled, strode back to confront Cramer, and demanded:

"You're a responsible police officer. This blackmailing threat is made in your presence. Do you know who I am? . . . Well?"

That was a fizzle, in spite of the fact that Cramer hadn't the faintest idea of what was going on. I wouldn't have given an unconditional guarantee on his brains, but there was nothing wrong with his nerve.

Relief Increase Urged to Save Girls From Sin

Vice Lords Acquire Penniless, Jobless Women, House Told

By the Associated Press

A Congressional group considering relief estimates heard testimony yesterday that many young girls, displaced from employment by married women and "ignored" by Government relief agencies, "become the property, body and soul, of the vice lords."

Miss Florence Birmingham, of Boston, president of the Massachusetts Women's Political Club, gave that testimony to the House Deficiency Appropriations subcommittee in pleading that relief funds for the year starting July 1 be boosted from the $985,000,000 tentatively recommended by President Roosevelt to $1,500,000,000.

"The influx of subsidized wives into the labor market," Miss Birmingham said, "has added to the general confusion and pushed their jobless needy sisters out of the picture entirely."

6,000,000 Working

Asserting that it was estimated 6,000,000 married women are working in this country, the witness added, "the worst offender, in my judgment, is the Federal Government."

Although she testified behind closed doors, Miss Birmingham made public the text of her statement.

Miss Birmingham contended that the relief act discriminated against single women and declared that "Congress must help these single women by giving a larger appropriation to continue the work of the WPA, to broaden it so as to allow them their rightful place on it."

Favors Quicker Spending

Reports reached Capitol Hill that President Roosevelt would prefer that Congress permit WPA to spend his $985,000,000 request for next year's appropriation in as few as eight months, if the need arises.

Mr. Roosevelt's January budget carried a $985,000,000 WPA estimate.

Economy advocates immediately asserted that if WPA were given the authority to spend the sum in eight months, instead of spreading it over 12, it would mean in effect that the relief agency might spend as much as $500,000,000 extra in the 1941 fiscal year.

Fire Inquiry Will Complete Report Today

Tansey, Committee To Make Suggestions For Greater Safety

A special committee investigating the cause of the blaze at the White Court Apartment which Monday caused the death of three persons, will meet today with Acting Engineer Commissioner Patrick H. Tansey to put the finishing touches on the report.

Chairman Schulte of the police and fire subcommittee of the House District Committee said yesterday he had received a letter from an "occupant" of the apartment building stating that "certain doors in the apartment had been locked on the night of the fire."

Although Chairman Schulte did not pay "too much credence to the letter, he said he would investigate this phase of the fire when his committee resumes hearing Tuesday.

Although Maj. Tansey yesterday received a preliminary report on the fire, he asked the committee to meet again today to discuss some phases of the report.

He said the report probably will be ready for release late today following the meeting. A second report, by the same committee, which will contain recommendations for legislation and methods to prevent similar catastrophes, will be completed in about two weeks, Maj. Tansey said.

Capt. John L. Person, assistant engineer commissioner, is at the head of the special committee, which also includes Herbert A. Friede, superintendent of the police and fire alarm systems; Calvin G. Lauber, District Fire Marshal, and Col. John W. Oehmann, building inspector.

It's All Right Pal—Editors and Daisies Don't Tell

If all Federal employes are as wary of the Hatch Act as one who came to the attention of The Post yesterday, there will be no political activity by them this year.

An employe of the Postoffice Department, discovering a letter in his family archives that seemed of historical interest, brought it to The Post. The letter was written September 13, 1842, by Henry Clay, to a correspondent who had asked his opinion on the many political issues of the day.

Among other suggestions, Clay urged an amendment to the Constitution "limiting the incumbent of the Presidential chair to a single term." John Tyler was President then.

"You can write about the letter, but don't mention my name in connection with it," the Federal employe said. "I might get in trouble on account of the Presidential campaign and the Hatch Act."

He meant it, too.

Dr. Rowe to Be Given Arbitration Medal

The 1940 Gold Medal of the Inter-American Commercial Arbitration Commission will be awarded to Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, April 12.

The presentation will be in the patio of the Pan-American Building at an hour to be announced. The ceremony will be witnessed by members of the commission, the Pan-American Society of New York, Government officials and Latin-American diplomats. Secretary of State Hull was the recipient of the 1939 medal.
